Napanoch Farm Produce Exhibit At State Fair

Produce from Farm of Institution for Defective Delinquents an Important Factor in Exhibit of State Institution Farms.

Farms connected with the thirty-eight state eleemosynary, hospital, and penal institutions contributed to the exhibit of the Bureau of State Institution Farms of the Department of Farms and Markets at the New York State Fair in Syracuse, which was awarded a cup as being a most representative exhibit and display.

The farm connected with the Institution for Defective Delinquents at Napanoch—Dr. W. N. Thayer, Jr., superintendent—was an important factor in providing this excellent exhibit. W. Robinson, in charge of the farm at the school, supervised the growing of a portion of the products which were used in the display.

Preparations were under way for a year for the exhibit of the products of the farms at the 38 state institutions at the State Fair. Commissioner Berne. A. Pyrke, of the Department, and Director Charles H. Baldwin, of the Bureau, were desirous of making a display which would show just what is done on these farms in the matter of producing fresh food for the inmates, which not only is a factor in improving their health, but which gives them healthful outdoor employment. Since the value of food produced annually is $1,389,571, there is an economic phase to be considered from the point of view of state expense.

The exhibit was one of the attractive spots and one of the show places of the State Institution building at the State Fair. It consisted of two horns of plenty mounted on huge platforms. In these, to overflowing, were the choice products of the state farms, consisting of freshly picked vegetables and fruit. The metal horns, which were about eight feet long, were covered with yellow corn which was made fast with shellac. Small bunches of green and purple grapes and foliage adorned the edge at the opening, and along this tiny electric lights glimmered. Vines with clusters of grapes encircled the body of the horns. The exhibit included every garden product produced in New York state, and was arranged with effective variation of color. The framework of the booth, in keeping with the general scheme, was of lattice work, from which hung grape vines with excellent specimens of the fruit. Green and yellow pumpkins, electrically equipped, blinked from the top of the supporting columns; shocks of rye and oats neatly arranged, also products of the state farms, made an effective background.

Dressed poultry, meats and dairy products were displayed in large refrigerators. The exhibit also showed the annual production of milk, eggs, and butter on the state farms. Fruits and vegetables canned at the institutions for winter use were an interesting part of the exhibit. Other exhibits in the state institution department were held to be more spectacular, but the judges, members of the Council of Farms and Markets, held the horns of plenty with products from the state farms to be most representative.

Davis-Smith Club Organized Here

At a meeting of local Democrats held at the city hall Thursday evening a Davis-Smith Club was organized with City Judge Harry E. Schirick as chairman; Judge James A. Betts, honorary chairman; Thomas J. Kennedy, secretary; and Thomas F. Coughlin, treasurer. Vice chairmen will be appointed later. Brief addresses were made by Corporation Counsel James Jenkins, William R. Johnson of Saugerties, Thomas J. Comerford, Jacob V. Merrihew of Olive; Holt N. Winfield of Esopus, Mayor Morris Block, Thomas F. Coughlin and Clifford Van Etten, the Democratic candidate for county clerk. Resolutions were adopted endorsing the various Democratic candidates, local, state and national.

Husband Wanted To Set Up Still

Says Selma Hudson in Suit for Separation in Supreme Court—She Lived at Springtown, He at Union Hill, N. J.

In the supreme court this morning before Judge Hasbrouck, an inquest was taken in a separation action brought by Selma Hudson against her husband, Joseph Hudson. Mrs. Hudson, who resides on a farm at Springtown, sued for a separation on the grounds of cruelty, claiming that her husband treated her in a cruel manner, that at one time he threatened her with a revolver and that he used abusive language and on one occasion threw her down stairs.

The Hudsons were married at Union Hill, N. J., in 1918, and have two children, 5 and 6 years of age. Mrs. Hudson resided with Mr. Hudson several years prior to their marriage. Hudson was previously married and has a family of five children in Europe. In 1918 the Hudsons moved from Union Hill to Springtown, where they purchased a farm. Mrs. Hudson conducted the farm and Mr. Hudson came to Springtown from time to time while he continued to work at Union Hill. She testified that she did not know how much he was earning, but at one time he came to the farm and told her he was worth $50,000. She also said he came there with another man and wanted to set up a still on the farm.

Chris. J. Flanagan, who represented Mr. Hudson, asked that the case be held over as two important witnesses could not be found and Mr. Hudson was out of the state. This application to have the case put over was denied and the case was taken up without a jury and no defense was offered. William D. Brinnier and Roscoe Ellsworth appeared for plaintiff.

Mr. Brinnier asked permission of the court to submit additional testimony as to the worth of Mr. Hudson after he had secured information in the matter. Mrs. Hudson claimed that she had never received any support from her husband for the children.

Arrests Son for Killing Bride

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Carlinville, Ills., Oct. 10.—Arrested by his father, Lester Kahl, 24 years old, son of Deputy Sheriff E. A. Kahl, of Shipman, 16 miles south of here, today was being held in jail with a net of gruesome evidence tightly drawn about him as the slayer of his pretty thirteen day bride, Margaret, 21.

While Sheriff John H. Russell was preparing for an emergency in case the high feeling might lead to an attempt to lynch young Kahl, a coroner's jury was being sworn in to hold an inquest over the bullet-riddled body of the bride.

The body was found last night in a shallow grave near Shipman, where Kahl led the sheriff after he had confessed he had shot his young bride. It had been buried three weeks.

"We had quarrelled over a girl I kept company with," young Kahl explained.

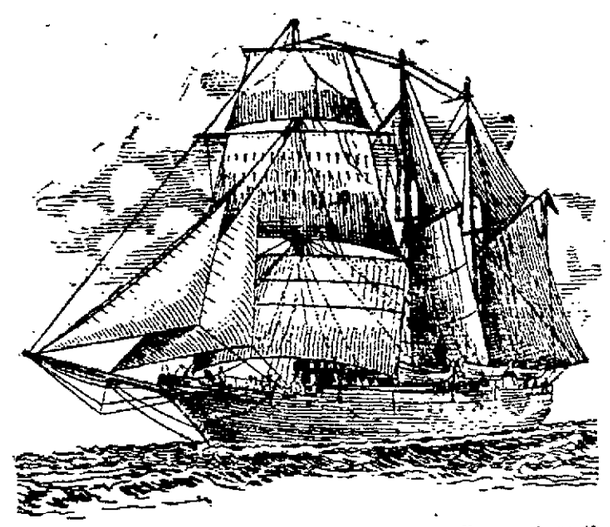
State Schoolship "Newport" Due at Kingston Saturday

Returns From Foreign Cruise and Will Anchor Off Kingston—Visitors May Inspect Ship—Young Men Have Opportunity to Enroll for Merchant Marine.



The New York State Schoolship "Newport," which has just returned from a foreign cruise, will make a trip up the Hudson river, arriving at Kingston on Saturday, and visitors will be at liberty to inspect the ship.

Any young man with a taste for a sea life between the ages of 17 and 20 have an opportunity to make application for admittance to the school, entrance examinations for which will be held in the latter part of this month.

The "Newport" left New London on July 5; visited London where the cadets had an opportunity to see the British Exposition at Wembley; were taken on a motor trip through Kent by the Mayor of Gravesend and then left for Antwerp, where they were the guests of the city, the museums, botanical gardens and other places of interest were thrown open to them free of charge. The next stop was Cadiz, from where they went to Palos, the point of departure of Columbus on his voyage of discovery. From there the ship sailed for Funchal, Madeira, where they had an opportunity to visit the yacht of Signor Marconi and have explained to them all of his scientific electrical apparatus. The ship then proceeded to Teneriffe in the Canary Islands and then started for home by way of Bermuda, the arrival in New York being on September 30.

A class will be graduated on October 16, graduation exercises to be held at the Maritime Exchange, New York city, after which the entrance examinations will be held to fill the vacancies.

This school is maintained by the state of New York and is under the supervision of the commissioner of education. There is no cost for tuition or board, the only cost being an entrance fee for clothing deposit approximating $130 for the two years.

Young men who have a taste for the sea life and who desire to become officers in the merchant marine have an excellent opportunity at this time to enroll.

Woman Tells of Killing With Axe

First Shot, Then Struck Employer With Axe He Had Carried—Question of Previous Conviction Involved in Manslaughter Trial.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Middletown, Conn., Oct. 10.—During a court recess which will last until next Tuesday morning, Judge Arthur F. Ells, who is presiding over the trial of Mrs. Johanna Tell, of Killingworth, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Charles F. Blair, her employer last April, will consider whether Mrs. Tell should answer a question asked by the prosecution concerning her alleged conviction for petty larceny in New York on November 22, 1922. Judge Ells ruled temporarily that the question was irrelevant and need not be answered, and court adjourned from Thursday afternoon until Tuesday morning while the jury had been temporarily excused during a re-reading of the question put by State's Attorney Inglis and objected to by Daniel Donahoe, Mrs. Tell's attorney.

The story of the alleged slaying of Blair has gone into the trial records from Mrs. Tell's lips. She will be cross-examined on Tuesday. Other witnesses are expected to follow on behalf of the state.

Under guidance of Judge Donahue, Mrs. Tell, as yesterday's court session drew to a close, told of her life from the first serious quarrel with Blair last January until the time of the killing. Mrs. Tell told how on Tuesday, April 8 last, Blair threatened her and told her it was her last day on earth. He asked her for the revolver that was in the house and when she refused to give it up, said he would find some other means of "getting" her. He went about the yard at work until her 15 year old daughter Lillian had gone to school, and Mrs. Tell went to a second floor to wait events.

Blair came in with an axe, she said, and threatened her. She sprang to the table and Blair charged at her. Then she shot. "I heard a shot and Blair fell," Mrs. Tell related. Seizing the axe that Blair dropped, Mrs. Tell struck the man several times. Then she dragged the body into the cellar and hid it over night, burying it in the yard next day.

Then State's Attorney Inglis asked about her alleged conviction in New York, the jury was excused and Judge Ells ruled the question out temporarily to study it later during the week.

Britain Prepares For Big Campaign

Nineteen Day Campaign for Candidates Who Seek Election to Parliament—Labor Party to Oppose Lloyd-George and Asquith.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Oct. 10.—While Labor party headquarters announced today that only 370 Laborite candidates were in the field working for election to Commons, it is believed this number will have been increased to 500 by election day, October 29.

Labor party election machinery is working smoothly in all but two of the 615 constituencies.

Premier MacDonald will make a tour of the country but will not campaign in London.

The Laborite cabinet headed by MacDonald will remain in power temporarily.

Malcolm MacDonald, son of the premier, who is now in the United States, will stand for parliament in the Basseltaw district. He will be unable to return in time for the campaign, so his sister, Isabel MacDonald, will conduct his campaign for him.

Oliver Baldwin, son of former Premier Stanley Baldwin, will run for Commons on the Laborite ticket despite the fact his father is a Tory.

A son of John Robert Clynes and two sons of Arthur Henderson will be candidates also.

For the first time the Labor party will put candidate in the field to oppose Former Premiers David Lloyd-George and H. H. Asquith.

Premier MacDonald appeared to hold the advantage as political forces rallied for the plunge toward election day, 19 days distant.

The Labor premier, leading one of the shortest and speediest exits of a cabinet in England's history, was winner of the first strategic move in the setting of the election day at the expiration of the twenty day period required by statute.

Liberal leaders were caught unprepared. Tories are not in as good shape to go to the polls as the Laborites. The Tories expect to put 500 candidates and the Liberals 200.

Schuhles Lose Suit With Farmer

He Agreed to Work Farm on Shares and They Sought to Break Contract—Jury Finds He Conducted It in Proper Manner.

The action brought in the Supreme court by John Schuhle and wife against Martin Thompkins to dissolve a joint venture and for an accounting was completed Thursday afternoon and sent to the jury. By this action Mr. Schuhle sought to break a contract entered into by him and Mr. Thompkins whereby Mr. Thompkins was to work the Schuhle farm at Highland on shares.

After Mr. Thompkins had worked a portion of the five years specified in the contract, Mr. Schuhle sought to have the contract broken and Mr. Thompkins evicted from the place on the ground that he had not worked the place in a satisfactory manner. Several witnesses were sworn from southern Ulster and testified that Thompkins had not conducted the farm in a proper manner, and that the fruit on the place was not taken care of as it should have been.

Several expert fruit growers testified that when they saw the trees they were not in a proper condition, that a very heavy crop of fruit was on the trees and that owing to the heavy crop the fruit was small and of inferior quality, and that the crop would be a drain on the trees which would injure the trees the following years.

On the other hand, defendant claims that he did work the farm properly; that he produced some excellent fruit and that persons seeking good fruit had come to his place, having been sent there by persons who knew that his fruit was of excellent quality. No testimony was produced to show that the fruit crop of last year had caused the trees to suffer this year. Mr. Thompkins contended that he had worked the farm properly and had hired men to assist him in so doing and that while he had been guaranteed a profit of $1,000 by Mr. Schuhle, he had made $2,600, which was split equally between them, and that both made $1,300.

The question submitted by the court to the jury which heard the evidence in the action brought by John Schuhle and wife against Martin Thompkins, an action to cancel a contract to work the Schuhle farm on shares, was whether Mr. Thompkins in the year 1923 conducted the farm in a workmanlike and proper manner. This question was answered "Yes" by the jury, which brought in a sealed verdict this morning when court convened.

A. D. and A. W. Lent appeared for plaintiff and William Mulvey of Poughkeepsie for defendant.

The jury was instructed to bring in a sealed verdict at the opening of court this morning.

No case was ready Thursday afternoon and court adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning.

World Broadcast Being Planned

For International Radio Week, Beginning November 24—World Peace Through Super-Power Broadcast Declares Manufacturer.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Oct. 10.—Promotion of world peace and understanding throughout the medium of super-power broadcasting will be a radio's greatest contribution to society, Powell Crossley, Jr., Cincinnati manufacturer, declared today at the national radio conference.

Crossley contemplates a system of international broadcasting among the big powers whereby the ideals, the music, the politics, the domestic and external problems of the one might be comprehended clearly by the other.

"Such a system," Crossley asserted, "means world-wide peace—the end of war and a great epoch of mutual understanding that the world has never hitherto known."

The beginning of the world broadcast plan is seen during international radio week, November 24 to 30, when at stated periods each night the big receiving stations of North America and Europe alternately will be silenced as they tune in to the programs of the other hemisphere.

"Should this country become involved in a misunderstanding with a foreign power, it would be simple to arrange for an inter-continental debate over the radio," Crossley explained. "By such a plan the people of two countries could listen in, forming their judgment from first hand information."

Within a few years, he predicted, the owners of ordinary radio sets will be listening in to London, Paris, Berlin and other big centers of the world.

An effort to complete the principal business of the radio conference will be made in a report to the conference probably late today.

The questions of super-power, wave lengths, interference, general broadcasting programs, marine communication, amateur problems and inter-connection will be dealt with in the general report.

Ten Thousand Turned Away at Washington Park For Final Series Game—Mogridge Replaces Ogden in First Inning.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Griffith Stadium, Washington, Oct. 10.—In the presence of the greatest and wildest crowd that ever witnessed a ball game in Washington, the New York Giants and the Washington Senators met this afternoon in the seventh and final game of the world's series. As the clubs went into action, each had won three games and only needed another victory to clinch the title. The prospectus was so interesting to Washington fandom that 38,000 crowded within the narrow confines of Griffith Stadium, ten thousand were turned away, at the gates, and only an all night vigil at the darkened box offices gained admittance for the 2,500 sun gods who occupied the limited spaces of the unreserved sections.

Another perfect day graced the occasion and the clubs went into action with neither favor nor hindrance. They were absolutely even on the important matter of pitchers, neither having anything to speak of in this direction. Washington had burned up Walter Johnson, Jez Zachary, and Fred Marberry; the Giants were all through with Art Nehf and Jack Bentley. All that seemed to remain was a duel of right hands, involving George McQuillan or Virgil Barnes of the Giants, and Curley Ogden of the Senators with the bare possibility that Mogridge's elderly left might be called upon.

In brief, it was any team's series in the pre-game calculations and the betting said that nothing worse than even money should prevail, in spite of the fact that Roger Peckinpaugh who re-injured his leg in yesterday's ninth inning was definitely out of the senatorial line-up.

That John J. McGraw was none too certain of his pitching selection was indicated this morning, when he spoke of Barnes as his probable pitching selection. The sharks found this statement difficult of digestion in view of the fact that Barnes failed to go the limit in the fourth game while McQuillan though taken out in the third game, had shown well as a relief pitcher on succeeding occasions.

Harris made it very clear at an early moment that he would use the same line up that finished the ninth inning yesterday. This called for Bluege to move over to short stop and Taylor, a recruit, to go to third base. He said he favored Ogden as his pitcher.

The Senators came on the field at 12:30 and were received with raucous acclaim. They immediately swung into batting practice, a very confident lot.

"You can say for me that the Senators will win today as sure as I know my own name," said Stanley Harris, the boy manager. "The club has always won games when it had to do it and this is one of those games."

His remarks, however, found no response from Mr. McGraw. The latter had nothing whatever to say and he said it. His only statement was to the effect that the Giants would play their usual game and that he expected them to win.

The Giants took up their batting practice at 1:10, Howard Baldwin serving them up from the right handed posture, in order to accustom the players to the starboard variety of pitching that Ogden was expected to furnish.

The recruit was laboring under the handicap of a recently fractured right wrist.

Fifteen minutes before game time, Barnes and Ogden went out to warm up, indicating that they would be the opposing pitchers.

The president and Mrs. Coolidge entered the park for their third world series game at 1:50. Mr. Coolidge posed for a picture with the players of both clubs and the umpires grouped about him. The actual business of the afternoon then began.

Today's Lineup.

Giants.	Senators.
Lindstrom, 3b.	McNeely, cf.
Frisch, 2b.	Harris, 2b.
Young, rf.	Rice, rf.
Kelly, cf.	Goslin, lf.
Terry, 1b.	Judge, 1b.
Wilson, lf.	Bluege, ss.
Jackson, ss.	Taylor, 3b.
Gowdy, c.	Ruel, c.
Barnes, p.	Ogden, p.

First Inning.

New York. Lindstrom up. Ball one, high. Strike one called. Strike called. Strike swung. Lindstrom struck out.

Frisch up. Ball one wide high. Ball two inside. Ball three inside. Strike one called. Ball four. Frisch walked.

Young up. After a conference with Ogden, Harris waved him to the bench in favor of Mogridge who had been warming up. Ball one wide. Foul, strike one. Strike two, called. Foul. Strike three swung. Young struck out.

Harris up. Strike one, called. Strike two, called. Ball one, wide. Ball two, wide. Strike three, swung. Harris fanned.

Rice up. Ball one, wide and low. Ball two, inside, low. Strike one, called. Strike two, swung. Foul. Rice out, Barnes to Terry.

None across.

Second Inning.

New York—Terry up. Terry out, Harris to Judge.

Jackson up. Ball one, wide. Jackson safe at first, on Taylor's wild throw to first. Taylor made a great stop of Jackson's high bounder but his throw pulled Judge off the base.

Gowdy up. Ball one, high. Gowdy singled to left, Jackson stopping at second.

Barnes up. Strike one, swung. Foul, strike two. Ball one, wide. Ball two, low. Ball three, wide. Foul, strike three. Barnes fanned.

No runs, one hit, one error, two left.

Goslin up. Strike one swung. Ball one wide. Strike two swung. Strike three swung. Goslin fanned.

Judge up. Strike one called. Ball one inside. Strike two swung. Judge lined to Frisch who speared the ball by leaping off the ground.

Third Inning.

Young up—Strike one, called. Ball one, wide. Foul, strike two. Foul. Young popped to Judge.

Washington—Taylor up. Ball one wide. Foul, strike one. Strike two, swung. Strike three swung. Taylor fanned.

Ruel up. Ball one wide, high. Ball two inside. Strike one called. Ball three inside. Strike two called. Foul. Ruel out, Barnes to Terry.

Mogridge up. Foul, strike one. Strike two, swung. Strike three. Mogridge called out on strikes. None across.

Fourth Inning.

Wilson up. Wilson out, Bluege to Judge.

Jackson up. Jackson out, the same way, Bluege to Judge. None across.

Washington—McNeely up. McNeely fanned.

Harris up. Harris hit a home run into the left field bleachers. Wilson in a desperate effort to catch the ball dived over the low railing in front of the bleachers, injurying himself. He stuck in the game, however.

Goslin up. Goslin out to Terry unassisted.

One run, one hit, no errors. None left.

Typhoon Damages Philippines

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Manila, Oct. 10.—Fragmentary reports of last week's typhoon in northern Luzon which began trickling in today revealed that thirty are known dead, 15 sail boats sunk and the steamer MacArla ashore and believed a total loss.

In many towns all of the Nipa huts were destroyed and the more substantial government buildings damaged. In Amulung municipality only four houses are left standing. All telegraph lines are down and no reports have yet been received from the villages in the interior.

The Red Cross and the government moved speedily to aid the typhoon sufferers, the steamer Mauban leaving late today with supplies.

Two New Styles For Cleveland Six

Two new five passenger closed body styles are announced as the latest addition to the Cleveland Six line of closed cars for 1925. They are the four door sedan De Luxe and brougham and are now on display in the show rooms of the Broadway Garage. Patterned along European body design with an impression of length, accentuated by low, sweeping contour, blending in harmony with beautifully designed radiator, rounded cowl and full moulded fenders, these closed cars are without question the most attractive closed types Cleveland has ever produced. An innovation which will be appreciated by car owners is the new self-ventilating type of one-piece windshield which may be raised or lowered by means of a convenient lever at the top of the windshield. A duct built into the cowl permits a constant circulation of air through the driver's compartment. The interior of the car is finished in a rich shade of gray to match the mohair upholstery. The front seats in the brougham are individual and when not in use the one opposite the driver's seat folds forward. The new "mileage motor," one-shot lubricating system for the chassis, balloon tires and four wheel brakes, the latter optional at slight extra cost, makes this car very popular.

PROBLEMS COME IN WITH ADDED YEARS

Provision Must Be Made for Life's Extension.

That the "average man" is now in possession of a considerable span of life in excess of that enjoyed by his "average grandfather" is emphasized anew by Sir George Newman, chief medical officer of the ministry of health, in his annual report for 1923, published recently. The facts and figures, moreover, which he submits, justify the conclusion that this greater expectation of life is likely to be permanent, a writer in the London Times comments. It may even be extended as the years pass. The bounty has come suddenly, within the space of a generation; so suddenly, indeed, that few of the recipients appear to know what to do with the unexpected gift. The majority go aimlessly to this new country of old age like so many "trippers." They are ill at ease; almost, it would seem, apologetic of their presence.

That perhaps is always the attitude of the "new rich," whether their riches be measured in sterling or in days and years. Yet the world is agreed in regarding it as an attitude of transition, a clumsiness of behavior and mind to be overcome as speedily as possible. Thus there is within sight a revision of the outlook upon old age. Not much longer will this period be regarded as a gambler contemplates his unexpected winnings; the time has arrived when the "feeling of luck" old folk are supposed to cherish must be exchanged for a sense of right. Old age will be counted on, like youth and middle age. It may even be pledged in advance to definite aims and purposes.

This sense of a new inheritance in years, and all that it implies, has nothing in common with the old idea of growing old gracefully. Indeed, it is rejection of that doctrine of passive resistance to the inevitable. To have planned the later years as the earlier are planned is to have filled them beforehand with the spirit of enterprise, which is the spirit of youth. It is to refuse to grow old at all. Such an attitude was impossible a generation ago; it is inevitable in these days. Indeed the whole scheme of living is now in process of transformation. For the added years exert an influence which extends back almost to the schoolroom. They make youth and the thoughts of youth longer, and they amplify and deepen the significance of maturity.

Thus men and women are able to take wider views and to build their hopes higher. The footfalls of pursuing Time have lost something of their menace. There are signs, in the present world, of the march of this process of evolution. Superficially the pace may appear to be quicker; actually there is less hurrying towards achievement. And resentment is keener against the charge of "growing old." Youth and age, indeed, seem to be discovering fresh bonds of sympathy in the general quickening of enthusiasm which is the accompaniment of an assurance of longer life. Age has so very much to give to youth and is so much more capable now of giving it effectively. The complaint is often made that each year of added existence tends to create an "older outlook" in the general mind by altering the proportions of recruits and veterans. But that complaint becomes groundless when the spirit of youth remains alive and active in the hearts of the old campaigners. Divided no longer by an impassable physical barrier, age and youth can meet on terms of equality in the common service of humanity.

Plant Trees to Save Birds

Three hundred coconut palms are to be shipped immediately to Bird Key, one of the Tortugas islands off the southwest coast of Florida, to protect the noddy tern from extinction, according to Dr. Paul Bartsch of the Smithsonian institution. This tiny island is the only place under the American flag where this species of gull-like birds breed. Several years ago a tropical hurricane swept across the island and destroyed the trees in which they used to nest. Now it is planned to grow new trees to provide apartments for these rare terns.

Dear Sirs

Please guard your hair

By Edna Wallace Hopper

I feel sorry to see men grow bald. It is easy to keep and to cultivate hair, and you owe it to yourselves and to us.

For many years I have sought and consulted some of the world's greatest experts on hair. They all agree that hair health comes from a clean and healthy scalp. Combat the hardened oil and dandruff which stifle the hair roots. Tone and stimulate the scalp. Then hair thrives, just as flowers thrive in a well-kept garden.

Those experts have always supplied me the best helps known to science. Each new and better help discovered has come to me at once. Now I have had all of these combined in a product I call my Hair Youth. I have placed it on drug and toilet counters at every woman's call. But men need it more than women, so this is written to urge men to learn how much it does.

I am no longer young. For 35 years I have been a stage star. But my hair today is thicker and finer than 40 years ago. I have never had falling hair or dandruff and never a touch of gray. Now I offer you in my Hair Youth every help which brought those results to me. I am well assured that they combine the greatest hair helps in existence.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Hair Youth is sold everywhere today. It costs 50c and $1 per bottle.

Write me for my Beauty Book and I'll send with it something else to please you. Edna Wallace Hopper, 536 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.

THE OFFICE CAT

By Junius.

The greatest aid to learning is thinking.

Most houses would make good homes if it wasn't for the people who lived in them.

They Seldom Do.

Cay I kiss you?
I should say not,
—But she didn't.

A Necessary Reform.

Mr. Greene came home from church wringing wet.

"America," he informed his wife, "will be a nobler land to live in when not every American thinks he can keep his religion and somebody else's umbrella."

Famous Words of Famous Celebs.

Ex.-Gov. Walton—I'm the guy who put the "O. K." in Oklahoma.

F. P. Adams—All colyumists live on wheezy street.

Ma Ferguson—Vox papa-lizing Texas.

Clarence Darrow—I'm so tender-hearted I couldn't even string beans.

Prince of Wales—All the King's hosses and all the King's men couldn't get me on an equine again.

Mayor Hylan—I just had to have my fling at politics.

Dist. Attorney Crowe—The most gorgeous place I ever saw was a room full of beautiful hangings.

Elinor Glyn—The hotter they are the better they sell.

Terrible Cruelty.

They have sent 20,000 flivvers to Germany, which is one heck of a way to relieve a suffering people.

It seems quite natural that tea hounds should be much interested in fox trots.

The only time a man has the last word is when he says, "Go ahead and bob it."

Is There a Doctor Present?

I only kissed her on the cheek,
It seemed a simple frolic,
But I was sick in bed a week—
They called it "painter's colic."

A "smoker" according to the modern definition, is not a stag party, but a two-legged animal with a cigar or cigaret in his mouth.

A Chicago professor says this year will pass into history without any summer. What have we had then—winter? And what will winter be like.

Opportunity doesn't always knock at the door these days. It sometimes smiles from the sidewalk.

Might As Well.

Mrs. Van Swamp—William, dear, as you have another chill coming on, will you kindly hold the baby's rattle in your hand? It amuses the sweet precious so much.

1—I hear that the girls are wearing hose with cotton tops again.

2—Yeah; cotton is so high now that it's out of sight.

He Got Off Easy.

She—Do you believe with the doctors that kissing is dangerous?

He—I'll say it is. One kiss cost me a lobster supper last night.

It would be interesting to know what kind of time an Olympic runner makes when his wife calls him.

KINGSTON, N. Y., OCT. 10, 1924.

"POLITICAL" DANCING.

The news from Europe that Isadora Duncan and Michael Bordkin, formerly associate dancers, are no longer on speaking terms, is in itself of no importance, but the reported cause of the rupture is interesting. It seems that Miss Duncan now holds that dancing is "a form of political expression," while Bordkin, not lacking in good sense, insists that it is nothing of the sort. Apparently she is eager to dance in the interests of Bolshevism, but Bordkin, whose grey matter seems to be still unclouded, fails to see how the thing can be done and would even prefer not to try. "Bolshevik agents will count the house wherever I go," he bitterly complains. "They will check up my figures and profits. Isadora Duncan approves of this. She can't dance and uses politics as an excuse to appear on the stage." Miss Duncan, on the other hand, though an American, seems to be an enthusiastic supporter of the plan of "political" dancing profitable in converts as well as in cash. She has formally announced that "all her dancing was a form of political expression," and expects "by stalking about the stage in a red veil to a Stravinsky rhythm to convert the world to Communism."

Let Isadora go to it! As the old proverb says, answer not the fool according to his folly. She can as readily talk politics with the uplifting of her feet and bodily swayings as do some of the other things she was billed to do—and did not do. To a certain extent emotions can be indicated by gesture and facial expression while the feet keep pace with a musical rhythm, but the pretense that dancing can unfold a long and intricate story (let alone present a political argument!) is and has been nothing but pure fake.

IS THE PUBLIC UNCLEAN?

Those who denounce movie producers, stage managers and fiction writers and publishers for the unwholesome "sex stuff" presented to the public should devote some part of their attention to the public's ready appetite for the same. In response to its criticisms the Philaphia Record has received a private letter from a motion picture producer who does not defend the objectionable pictures but points out that the public "fails utterly to support the really better pictures" and gives example of "two excellent and impeccable photoplays of real artistic merit" that did not even pay expenses. Commenting on this showing the Record confesses that it is "stumped" and goes on to say:

We find that many of the best selling novels are those which are unfit for immature readers and certainly not edifying to adults. We find the theatres crowded when unclothed chorus girls and racy dialogue are the attractions, and often half-empty when powerful drama unbolstered by suggestive situations, or clean wit in wholesome comedy, is presented. Movies with titles suggestive of domestic infidelity or loose morality in any of its forms draw big crowds, and those exploited by innocuous headlines, often the better and more gripping productions, suffer neglect. Who can doubt the validity of the argument that producers are giving their clientele what it wants?

The too common assumption that the public as a whole is clean-minded and that only the purveyors of unclean art are to blame is manifestly asburd. To prevent the production of such art is the minor problem. The far greater problem is the spiritual uplift of vast multitudes and the elevation of inherently debased taste.

It is announced from London that in a population of 380,000,000 in India 29,704 were killed by snakes during the past year, and the reptiles are increasing in spite of government bounties. In our population of 112,000,000 no less than 8,400 persons were killed by automobiles in the first six months of 1924. These figures show that America's automobiles are just about as deadly as India's snakes. No doubt they are increasing more rapidly, too.

A new treasure-hunting expedition has put to sea. This time the object of the quest is the gold and jewels in the sunken Merida, rammed off Cape Charles in 1911. If the hunters locate and raise the treasure they should be prepared to guard it well enroute, for in these times pirates have come to life again, and, though they are out only for cases of liquor by the thousands, they might regard gold as almost as valuable and the more tempting for being less bulky.

In approving for France without reservation the peace protocol presented to the assembly of the League of Nations on October 1, Aristide Briand said: "In modern war there is no victor, but all are vanquished. And such is the world today that defeat finds out the farthest nation and weighs upon it with crushing force." Never were truer words spoken.

Mussolini proposes to erect in Rome a skyscraper of 88 stories, 1,500 feet high. And the gasoline launch is to supersede the Venetian gondola, too. At this rate the old-time and beautiful Italy will soon be a thing of the past.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M. D.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.)

DON'T OBSTRUCT NATURE.

One of the first things my mother taught me was that when I had eaten something that was not good for me, that my stomach rejected it, and so I vomited. That vomiting was a good act that nature performed for me.

I have often thought of the various things that nature does for us, and in our blindness we either fail to recognize them or actually take means to prevent them.

For instance, something goes wrong inside you, and immediately your heart beats faster and stronger, you can feel yourself getting warmer and warmer, and you realize that you have some temperature a "fever," as it is often called.

Now, your first impulse is to reduce that fever, and you get some tablets for that purpose.

This temperature or fever is just nature's effort to combat whatever is going wrong, and if the fever is not too high your best plan is to lie down, abstain from food, and let the fight go on.

If the temperature gets too high your doctor will then help to keep it within safe limits.

And then the eruptions that we see in the childhood ailments such as measles, chickenpox, scarlet fever, and so forth, are again just one of nature's methods of ridding the blood of harmful substances.

And in the chronic skin ailments, where the eruption persists for weeks or months, the healing of the skin itself should be only a part of the treatment.

The real cause is in the food, or in the way your body handles the food, and the resulting blood causes the trouble.

Nature is again just giving you outward evidence of inward trouble, trusting to your good sense to get busy and remove the cause.

So don't worry about a little temperature, a little eruption or a vomiting spell, if they occur occasionally.

Just think of it as a signal that you've done something wrong physically, and profit to the extent of trying to remember just what it is you have done.

You'll think twice before doing it thereafter.

ALLIGERVILLE

Alligerville, Oct. 9.—Business was very quiet in this village Wednesday. Mr. Maltz's store was closed and all the Jewish people observed the day.

William Christiana has had a new pipeless heater installed in his house.

A well attended and enthusiastic Home Bureau meeting was held Wednesday afternoon at Mrs. DeGraw's. Mrs. Neff, the leader, gave a lesson in the making of hats.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Bean of Ridgefield Park, N. J., are spending their vacation with Mrs. Bean's mother, Mrs. Mary Krom.

The school tax list is out and in the hands of the collector, Alton Purcell.

George Garrison has had his barn re-roofed and a new floor put in, and is now having work done on the house. George Decker of Kerhonkson is doing the work.

Mr. and Mrs. David Purcell were in Kingston Wednesday afternoon to see a doctor. Mrs. Purcell is suffering from ulcerated teeth.

TWENTY AND TEN YEARS AGO.

Oct. 10, 1904.—Engagement of Miss Minnie Cooney and Daniel Fitzgerald announced.

Harvey Spencer asphyxiated by gas at hotel in New York city.

Oct. 10, 1914.—Kingston was facing a water famine with but three weeks' supply of water in reservoir.

Miss Maria Davis died on Warren street.

Mrs. Anthony Walter died on Ravine street.

HOW

SEA ANEMONES DO THEIR WORK UNDER THE SEA.—At first glance the sea anemones are more flower-like than animal-like. These delicate, richly colored organisms with their numerous tentacles have received names derived from flowers: sea anemones, passion-flower anemones, crimson anemones, etc., are names which characterize their outer appearance correctly, for they change the naked rocks of the shore to floral beds. But, says Nature Magazine of Washington, the life of these animals is in no way flower-like. They are very voracious, catching young fish, worms, crayfish, snails, etc., which are often much larger than themselves. They have peculiar protective ability in their tentacles, which also serve to daze their prey.

These are stinging organs, tiny, microscopical, bottle-shaped glands filled with a burning alkaline fluid. When touched, hollow coiled threads suddenly project, dart toward the touching object with their tiny hooks, and press out the fluid of the capsule, which then enters the wound. Such stinging glands are very numerous on each tentacle; in fact, thousands being located in one.

Sea anemones which have congregated in groups, and live in colonies and have excreted a more or less hard skeleton, whose branches have become calcareous, are corals. Every coral branch, or colony had its beginning in one individual which happened to attach itself to that particular place and grew up in the shape of a tiny sea anemone.

Upon the under surface of the cylindrical body the animal secretes calcareous plates which join it intimately to its support. Then the calcareous plates grow upward radially, and the outer side of the animal is bounded by a skeleton of lime which grows higher and higher, drawing the polyp before it.

Thus it happens that at the branches of a coral colony often thousands of animals continue to build upwards, while the lower animals have long since died. In this way these delicate little animals build mighty reefs and many tropical islands are built by unceasing and untiring work.

How Cotton Is Treated to Prevent Shrinkage

Mercerization is the process of treating cotton under tension in a caustic-soda solution, thus preventing its shrinkage and so giving it gloss. The yarn, after being washed and dried, is put into the caustic soda for about fifteen minutes. Then it is stretched back to its original size, and possibly again put through the caustic-soda solution under tension. While still being stretched it is washed in water containing a chemical; in most cases sulphuric acid. This chemical counteracts any harmful effect which the caustic soda might have on the cloth and keeps it from stretching, says the Detroit News.

Usually the material is bleached after the mercerizing, though the order of the processes may be reversed. Finally it is dyed, singed and calendered. The yarns may be gassed before they are mercerized, so that ends of the fibers are burned off. Calendering, on the other hand, is merely passing the material under rollers, engraved with fine lines, which so press the threads of the cloth that it reflects the light and has high luster.

How Magic Lures Fish

Joseph Hand has broken all hand-line fishing records on the New Jersey coast. While fishing in Cold Springs inlet Hand, who is known in fishing circles as the Harbor Pike, caught more than 1,000 pounds of weakfish, for which he received $200 in the local market, says a Cape May dispatch to the New York Times.

Hand said that he had been offered a big sum by a syndicate to divulge what bait he uses to make the fish rise to his lines while other fishermen within a stone's throw of his boat get never a nibble.

Hand said that he could not be tempted to sell his secret. It was told to him, he explained, by an old Indian chief who passed through this city some time ago with a medicine company.

How Water Cuts Stone

As closely as mathematicians can measure it, 150,000 cubic feet of water goes over Niagara falls each second. Of this amount only 5 per cent goes over the American falls. The great volume going over the Horseshoe falls or the Canadian falls is rapidly eroding a kind of gulf or throat which is drawing more and more water from both sides of the Horseshoe, and before many years, it is feared, will eat a huge "V" into the limestone. Conservation experts are studying the situation which may have grave consequences.

Workers Shift Los Angeles Giant Date Palm Tree

Los Angeles.—One of the landmarks of the old Los Angeles—the giant date palm tree from which Date street was named—has been moved into private grounds.

The history of the tree goes back to 1786, when Cornelio Agina was sent by the padres of the California missions to Sinaloa, Mexico, to obtain fruit trees for planting in California. As a seedling, the tree was planted in Date street and grew there.

Officials of the company which moved the tree estimated it weighed 30,000 pounds. It is more than eighty feet high and two derricks were necessary in the operation of lifting it out of the excavation and placing it in the earth-filled box in which it was moved. The cost was approximately $1,500.

"Carillon" and "Chime"

The word "carillon" should be used to indicate the musical instrument consisting of about three or four chromatic octaves of perfectly attuned bells, played by both hands and both feet by means of a keyboard and pedal board. A chime is made up of from four to sixteen substantially diatonic bells.

Kidnapped Girl Escapes by Ruse

Promised to Marry Kidnapper Provided He Would Buy Clothes, but Called for Help on Reaching Department Store.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 10.—"Help me. Help me. Help me. He's kidnapped me. Police."

This cry in a crowded downtown department store is responsible today for the freedom of Josephine Sarica, 17, of Binghamton, who declares she was abducted by Joseph Marabito, 27, also of Binghamton, and brought to this city.

Marabito and the girl were surrounded by a circle of shoppers, and police were called. Taken to headquarters, Marabito confessed, police say, that he kidnapped Josephine, with the aid of two other men. Tuesday morning, in Binghamton, after she had refused to marry him.

Josephine's cry for help came after she conceived the trip to the store as a ruse to escape, according to her story. She said she promised to marry Marabito if he would buy her some new clothes, and in the crowded store she felt it safe in crying out.

The girl said she was kept in a barn just over the Pennsylvania border Tuesday night and Wednesday night was spent in a house in the southern part of the state. Yesterday Marabito brought her to this city.

Marabito had been engaged to Josephine until a week ago, when she returned his ring.

ROMANCE NOT FOR GIRL WITH GLASSES

Short-Sighted Maiden Bemoans Unhappy Fate.

Two small pieces of glass, a gold bridge and a thin chain stand between me and the greatest thing in a girl's life—romance!

It is an unhappy fate that enrolled me a member of the "gig-lamp" brigade, "A Short-Sighted Girl" laments in the Washington Post. My glasses make me look highbrow, sensible, prim, old-maidish, and even dowdy, whereas I love life, laughter, absurd talk and fluffy clothes—imagine a bespectacled girl in fluffy clothes!—and I yearn for a little of the romance that might have been mine had I not been short-sighted.

Men always seem frightened of me. When I am out with another girl and we meet some of her men friends they freeze completely when they are introduced to me. "Oh, Lord!" I can see them thinking.

They shake my hand most politely, ask if I am well—a brutal question, by the way—and discuss the weather, books, or the political outlook. All this as if I despised the glorious chatter about tennis, dancing, film stars and such things!

Of course, I cannot blame them. There is no denying that, on a girl, glasses are unromantic. Nothing could be more unravishing than a shy glance through a double pebble! And who would sympathize with a girl's tears when they were magnified threefold by an oval of glass? If some experimental man were to kiss me suddenly he would probably knock my glasses off in the attempt, and my embryonic romance would be shattered with my glasses on the floor.

A girl may be as fragile as a hothouse plant, but so long as she is pretty she will have a host of admirers. Yet a small and unimportant eye trouble, which necessitates the wearing of glasses, destroys all my chance of winning a man's admiration.

If I were a writer I would produce a great novel about a girl who wore spectacles. I would make her wonderfully charming and sweet. I would make the dashing hero fall in love with her just after a glint of sun, reflected by her glasses, had shone in his face. But who would want to read it?

Sometimes I long to throw those glasses of mine on the floor and jump on them. But I know I must not. If I did I would only have to buy another pair!

Now It's Worse

Mrs. Blank is a very nervous woman, so much so that at times she quite gets on Blank's nerves. At first all night long she imagined she could hear somebody moving about downstairs. Every time a window rattled or a shutter creaked she would wake her husband and say:

"Oh, John, there are burglars downstairs! Don't you hear them? Oh, what shall we do?"

But at last Blank hit on an idea that he thought would compose his wife permanently.

"Look here," he said, "you can rest assured that these noises are not burglars. Burglars work in absolute silence. You never hear a sound from them."

And now Mrs. Blank goes into a frenzy and wakes her husband up whenever there's no noise.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

What Is a "Tinker's Dam"?

A "tinker's dam," says the Kansas City Star, is a wall of dough or of soft clay raised around a spot which a plumber, in repairing, desires to flood with solder. The material of this dam can be used only once, and is thrown away after this very temporary period of usefulness. Hence the saying "not worth a tinker's dam," which either through a perverse humor or through misunderstanding has been converted into profanity by the addition of a final "n."

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION.

UNINVITED WIND

"I have a funny engagement," said Mr. Wind.

The Breeze Brothers looked at Mr. Wind and said:

"You seem to be getting dressed up in your best."

"Yes," said Mr. Wind, "I have put on my best windy cape, and my best windy hat and my best fly-away windy shoes. But I have really nothing which makes me keep this engagement of mine.

"I mean that I have had no invitation to go where I am going. But I am going just the same.

"You see some creatures are so silly. They don't blow in on others for supper, for example. They wait until they're asked.

"Sometimes they will hint for an invitation. But most of the time they will not even do that.

"They wait until they are asked, and if they're not asked they just don't go at all.

"But I am different.

"I feel like going on a party and I feel like seeing some people and so I am going.

"I haven't hinted about it. No, I have not done that. Nor have I been invited, as I've said.

"But I feel as though I would like to have some fun blowing through window cracks, and if windows are open I shall blow right in and I shall not have my best manners with me.

"No, I'm going to leave my best manners at home.

"You know I often do that. I say to myself:

"'Now, Wind, go out and have a good time and don't bother about manners.'

"And then I answer myself in this fashion:

"'All right, Wind, I'll do as you suggest.'

"So I just leave my manners at home wrapped up for safekeeping in case I may want them at some time.

"That is one of the advantages about not being asked to a party.

"If I had been invited to visit the people I might have felt it my duty to have unpacked my best manners before I started.

"I might have felt that I would have had to say how kind it was of them to have invited me, and I might have felt that I would have to say that it was such a pleasure.

"It is a pleasure to go, but I don't have to say so. Nor do I have to say it was kind of them to have invited me for they haven't invited me at all.

"And when I want to leave I don't have to shake hands with my host and hostess and tell them what a good time I had. No, I don't have to take a single manner along with me."

"We didn't know that manners ever came singly," said the Breeze Brothers.

"You don't know everything," said Mr. Wind, with a little windy smile.

"Ah, yes, I have lots of manners if I want to use a lot and if I only want one or two I may only use one or two.

"People are the same way. They may go out and not say a polite thing and then just before leaving they may make one polite speech.

"That was just one manner they took along with them.

"Or that is the way I speak of manners at any rate, and I don't see why I'm not quite right in speaking as I do.

"I'm a powerful fellow in my way and I'm sure what I say is right, to my own windy way of thinking at any rate.

"But I can't talk to you any more, I must be off. I am coming to call on lots of people.

"I shall blow right in between the cracks, as I've said, and I'll stir up a lot of air.

"People will say that I have come uninvited and that I have been able to get in all sorts of places.

"They will speak of putting window strips upon their windows to keep me out.

"But I won't mind. For Mr. Wind has a way of getting in when he wants to get in, and anyway, I will have had my fun this time.

"So, Breeze Brothers, I must be off."

He waved a windy farewell to the Breeze Brothers and they waved to him.

And off went Mr. Wind, quite uninvited, but expecting to have a very jolly time just the same.

The KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"From four things God preserve us—a painted woman, a conceited valet, salt beef without mustard, and a late dinner."

FOR SPECIAL OCCASIONS.

When canning or preserving a small jar or two of something quite a choice of fruits may be prepared, which will be appreciated. To have these delectable fruits in variety one must plan for them, as all fruits vary so in season. Here is something that one may enjoy preparing which will prove a rare treat:

Fruit Melange.—A stone crock or a large glass jar will be best for this combination. The fruits are preserved separately; when one is making any particular kind of preserves, save a cupful for the melange jar. Arrange in layers without stirring and keep closely covered and in a cool place between times. Peaches, pears and all of the later fruits may go into the jar; when it is full, the fruit may be stirred lightly and just before closing it add a pint jar of maraschino cherries. Let ripen a month before using.

Do not add water to jams if it can be avoided. Usually there will be small broken bits of fruit which will form sufficient juice when crushed. Unripe fruit added to the ripe fruit will provide the pectin which gives the proper texture to the finished product.

Peaches Preserved in Raspberry Juice.—Two quarts of raspberries, four quarts of peaches and seven pounds of sugar will make eight to ten pints of this preserve. As peaches are not so plentiful in most markets when raspberries are ripe, one may use the canned fruit, straining and adding one or two cupfuls of water and half of the sugar; less sugar is needed with already sweetened fruit. Boil the strained juice and sugar, skimming until a thin syrup is formed, adding a few crushed peach kernels for flavor. Now add the rest of the sugar and the halved peaches a few at a time, cooking them quickly until clear, remove from the syrup, cool and pour the boiling hot syrup over them, allowing them to stand until perfectly cold before canning. The juice is then boiled up again and poured over the fruit which is packed in jars. Pineapple juice, grape juice, strawberry juice may be used, making most delightful sweets.

Crowds Turn Out To See Roosevelt

Famous Roosevelt Smile and Handclasp Attract People From Miles Around on Candidate's Campaign Tour Up-State.

In the throngs that have greeted Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Republican candidate for governor, all along the line from New York city up through the Hudson valley and on into the north country, there has been sounded a distinct vote of confidence in the integrity and steadfastness of purpose of the colonel. Many women have been in the crowds and many of these have brought forward their children to ask for the Roosevelt smile and the Roosevelt handclasp.

This reception, which Mrs. Roosevelt joins, is one of the features of the colonel's trip. Old timers say that it is apparent that many have driven for miles with their families to greet the Republican candidate.

Colonel Roosevelt has been out now in the upstate for about a week, and it is plain that his strength is growing daily. Colonel Roosevelt is soberly and seriously discussing the issues in the campaign. He is pointing to Calvin Coolidge, national standard bearer of the Republican party, as a man who personifies the ideals of Americanism and Republicanism.

"He is a man who uses words not conceal what he thinks, but to ake what he thinks clear to the eople of the country," says the colnel. "He is a man who says what e means and after that puts it into ction."

When the Democrats took over the government at Washington some welve years ago, Colonel Roosevelt ates, the national debt was nine undred and sixty millions of dolrs, and when they left it was twenty-four billions.

"After four years of Republican dministration in Washington, the Republicans have decreased the national debt by two and three-quarters billions," Colonel Roosevelt states. He declares that some of the expense during Democratic incumbency was due to the war, but that a large part of it was waste, and nothing but waste. The interest and sinking fund charges when the Republicans went to Washington, after eight years of Democratic rule, were larger than the entire face value of the national debt had been when the Democrats went down there."

Colonel Roosevelt in taking up questions with regard to the state, says it is the same in the state as in the nation. He says the Democratic party has been shouting economy and efficiency and asks "What is the record?"

"During the last two Democratic administrations this and the preceding Democratic administrations, the cost of state government went up one hundred per cent. It just doubled. That is the way they make good on their promises of economy. During the last Republican administration in this state, we cut the cost of government ten per cent and we are going to do the same again."

Rosalie Lowe Whitney of New York, is one of the Republican speakers on Colonel Roosevelt's special train. Fred W. Hammond of Syracuse, clerk of the assembly, is also with the colonel.

Wadsworth With Roosevelt.

United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., began his speaking campaign in behalf of the Republican national and state tickets at Ogdensburg Friday night, speaking from the same platform with Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Republican nominee for governor. They will speak together many nights. On Thursday, October 16, they will both speak at Oneonta.

HIGHLAND.

Highland, Oct. 9.—Auxiliary Club at M. E. Church parlor Friday evening was attended by 50, also several guests. Reports of committees showed their work was well in hand. Business of future affairs taken up. November 7th there will be an annual dinner and December 5th, afternoon and evening. Something important and several social silver teas have been given and more to follow for club assistance. The room was prettily decorated with beautiful flowers by Miss A. Terwilliger. The brevity and pithiness of the reports were not a weariness but a source of vital interest and were especially gratifying. News in regard to affairs to be given under auspices of the club will be published later. There were five hostesses, Mrs. Hitchcock, Mrs. Caldwell, Mrs. Gedney, Mrs. Smedes and Miss A. Terwilliger, who gave to all unstinted hospitality. The evening was full, to overflowing of sociability, and hostesses served a delicious repast, which all enjoyed. As members left for their homes much pleasure was expressed to the entertainers, who had left a lasting expression upon the memory of all for their courtesies.

Mrs. George Winins of Poughkeepsie, has been a guest of her mother, Mrs. George Main, Sr., on Washington avenue.

Mrs. George Main, Sr., of this place, is visiting in Kingston.

Hose Company from here was in Walden Saturday, and enjoyed the clam bake. The boys said they knew how to do things in great shape. They had a fine time and hope to have more of the same next season.

Several Presbyterian ladies from here were in Kingston last week attending the presbytery meeting, which was very interesting.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Tease entertained Mrs. S. Taber of Clintondale last week.

M. E. Church held rally day service last Sunday. The Rev. Gulick, county superintendents of Sunday schools, was the speaker. There was a large attendance and it was very interesting, also the service in the evening by the Epworth League.

Mrs. Suzanne E. Decker, grand representative to the National Council, Daughters of America, which convenes in Cincinnati, Ohio, this week, left Poughkeepsie Sunday for Hotel Gibson, headquarters. The representatives from various cities will meet for judicial, executive and legislative affairs. On her return home, the home council has invited guests from Kingston, Saugerties and Poughkeepsie to greet her October 15. She will give report of her trip and work. There will be a program and all members are expected to be present for a jolly home coming.

Miss Frances Bruyn entertained 20 ladies at her home Wednesday afternoon. Silver offering was good. These teas are popular. The social side is greatly enjoyed. Refreshments were served and all declared Miss Bruyn a charming hostess.

J. C. Feeter, also F. L. Metcalf, attended the weding of Miss Cole, a relative, at Little Falls Saturday evening, October 4.

Moses Young is at present boarding at The Elms.

Mrs. George Hildebrand, Vineyard avenue, was hostess to three tables of Mah Jongg. The ladies had an interesting afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Upright of Red Bank, N. J., were week end guests of Mrs. A. Upright on Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Feeter had as their guest the past week Mr. Campbell of Oneida, who was at one time a resident of this place.

Mrs. Theron DuBois and Mrs. Charles DuBois were present at the wedding in the German Lutheran Church Thursday last. It was a very pretty affair.

F. S. Decker of Coxsackie is a guest of his brother, Captain R. H. Decker, this week. Thursday, they, with A. V. Decker of Pleasant Valley and G. H. Mackey attended Danbury fair, going in Mr. Mackey's Willis-Knight sedan. They report a fine time and everything at fair very interesting.

H. Weigenaar is now on a trip to Chicago.

Mrs. McHns is attending the W. C. T. U. convention at Oneonta. She will be there a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Solomon G. Carpenter have returned from a very delightful trip to Vermont.

John C. Feeter is spending some time in Utica.

There was a food sale on Dr. Blakely's lawn under auspices of Christian Endeavor of Presbyterian Church Saturday afternoon. They sold out readily and everything was good.

Martin Schantz is still in bed and under the doctor's and trained nurse's care. He improves slowly.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Jordan of Milton avenue, have as their guests, Mr. Jordon's sister and children from New York.

Miss Emma Paltridge has had a severe cold, but is now improving.

Dinner will be served to the veterans in Grange Hall Saturday, October 18th, at noon, under the auspices of the Auxiliary Club. They will have camp fire and addresses after the meal This is an annual affair.

Mrs. Walter Constable entertained a large delegation of ladies at her home Saturday afternoon. All sorts of fancy work was going on, and conversation without end. The hostess served delicious refreshments. A nice sum was realized for the club.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rhodes and Mrs. C. Terwillger visited the Rev. and Mrs. F. W. Coons at Cornwall last week.

Funeral services for Mrs. W. E. Wilcox were held from her late home Wednesday afternoon, October 1, and were largely attended. Her pastor, the Rev. Richard Braunstein, officiated, assisted by a former pastor, the Rev. J. W. Tetley. She will be greatly missed in the home and the Auxiliary Club of which she was one of the vice-presidents. She was highly esteemed, as was shown by the elaborate and beautiful floral emblems. Two automobiles carried them to her last resting place. Heartfelt sympathy goes out to those who are left to mourn her loss.

SAUGERTIES.

Saugerties, Oct. 10. — Alfred Wirth, employed on the new First National Bank building by the Glantz Construction Co., had the misfortune to contract blood poison in his right hand. While at work there recently a rusty nail ripped his hand and after the wound was healed, inflammation set in. Dr. R. F. Diedling is attending Mr. Wirth.

BIRD GUIDES MEN TO BEES' STORE

Chatters Until It Is Followed and Then Feasts Upon Larvae of Bees.

New York.—One of the strangest characters of the bird world is the common African honey-guide, first brought to the attention of the western world before 1700 by Father Jerome Lobo, a missionary to Abyssinia.

An object of almost superstitious veneration by the natives, this strange bird performs a useful service in conducting man to some beehive it has previously located. How it came to know that man could help it get the food it prefers is still a matter for conjecture; but through man's aid the honey-guide often feasts upon the bee larvae, which, scientists believe, it probably covets more than the honey itself.

Both the male and female bird have been observed to act as guides; but the female, in addition, has the questionable habit of laying her eggs in the nests of other birds and thus avoiding the responsibilities of motherhood. Although resembling the American "cowbird" in this practice, the honey-guide is a near relative not of the "cowbird" but of the woodpecker. Nevertheless, it rarely, if ever, climbs about the trunks of trees, preferring to perch on twigs and boughs. As in the case of woodpeckers, only two toes of each foot are directed forward, two being pointed to the rear.

Curator Tells of Characteristics.

James P. Chapin, associate curator of birds of the Eastern Hemisphere at the American Museum of Natural History, who has observed this bird on numerous occasions while conducting expeditions in the Congo, writes of its characteristics in the museum's publication, Natural History.

"Were a facetious journalist," Mr. Chapin says, "to attempt to endow a mythical bird with some startling but imaginary instinct, he would hardly be likely to go to the length to which nature has gone in the case of the honey-guide. The strange behavior of this bird has so long been known, moreover, that it surprises one to learn how little has been written about it beyond simple accounts of the way the bird attracts the attention of men and reveals to them the location of beehives.

"Avoiding the heavy forests of the Congo basin and other parts of western Africa, the honey-guide ranges from Cape Colony to northeast Africa, and then across the Sudan to Senegal. It is a plain-colored, brownish gray bird, scarcely larger than our American bluebird, but much more stockily built, with short, dense plumage and a skin so tough that it has often been considered a cuirass against the stings of bees.

"When fully grown, both sexes have half-concealed epaulettes of yellow; and the male bird is then distinguished by a large black throat patch. The young birds are somewhat greener, and until a few years ago were regarded as a distinct species. The nearest relatives of the honey-guide in our New World fauna are the woodpeckers; but the honey-guides have no stiffened tail feathers nor an extensile tongue.

Bird Protected by Natives.

"Everywhere the honey-guide is known and is prized by the natives of the country where it dwells may easily be imagined. By the Azande tribe of the northeastern Congo the bird is called 'indikidiki,' and I was told that before the arrival of Europeans an Azande chief would have cut off the ears of any man so stupid as to have killed a honey guide.

"Herbert Lang and I had many experiences with honey-guides attracted by our caravans or hunting parties. It is the habit of the bird to locate one or more bee colonies and then wait for the passing of men whose attention it attracts by a persistent chattering. At such times it is relatively tame and will alight in small trees only a few yards off. If a man wishes to learn where the hive is, he follows the bird, whistling occasionally to it.

"Here I may quote an instance from my own notes. One afternoon in November, 1911, in a small wooded swamp near Fradle, a post in the northeastern corner of the Congo, we came upon a male bird, who at once started his chatter, and then flew off to some distance, returning shortly as though to assure himself that we were in earnest. We replied with low whistles, and following him through the tall grass and scrub, were led out on higher ground. Now, our feathered guide would fly noisily ahead about fifty yards until out of sight, perching on top of a bush and repeating the performance as soon as we came up.

"Presently another male bird joined him. We had gone about six hundred yards when both birds stopped in a tree too small to harbor bees in its trunk. Yet by their short aimless flights and repeated returns to the tree, the honey-guides impressed upon us that this was the spot. The buzzing of passing bees now was heard and the insects were traced to a small hole in the ground close by. During these proceedings the birds allowed us to approach within ten or fifteen feet of them.

"We prepared to make a fire, and the birds retired noiselessly for the time. A little later I saw them again, sitting with puffed out breasts and open bills, uttering a low chwee-r-r, which I had not heard before. They seemed to be quarreling, and one soon chased his rival off at top speed.

Helpers Stung by Bees.

"With the aid of some burning grass two of my black helpers quickly had the hive unearthed, paying the penalty of only six stings. The comb contained no honey, only pollen and bee larvae. It was in a cavity previously occupied by termites.

"We placed some of the comb in the forks of a tree and went off to escape an impending shower. An hour or two later we found that the two birds had returned to peck at the comb; and the following morning I watched them come silently, the one after the other, to seize a piece of the comb and fly off with it. Without crediting the birds with actual foresight or intelligence, I do not hesitate to say that it was for this reward that they had worked.

"It is said that where the negroes have artificial hives hanging in trees for the use of bees, the honey-guides make no distinction and will lead to occupied hives established through man's agency as readily as to natural cavities housing wild-bee colonies. This I believe, though I have not had occasion to verify it even among the Logo of the eastern Uelle district, who attract bees with hives made of reeds.

"The assertion has also been made that the honey-guide will sometimes lead a man up to a snake or a leopard, but this has been vigorously denied by experienced naturalists.

"A story far better founded is that of the honey-badger following the honey-guide. Major Stevenson-Hamilton describes it as though he had often observed it himself:

"'You may be resting in the bush in the cool of the afternoon or on some cloudy day, when your attention is arrested by the persistent and approaching chatter of one of these feathered spies. Presently the bird itself comes fluttering onto a branch some forty yards distant, where it perches, flapping its wings and displaying every sign of impatience.

Followed by Small Animal.

"'For a moment it is silent, and then a less familiar sound strikes the ear—slight sibilant hissing and chuckling, which at first you find yourself unable to identify. . . . The honey-guide understands, and having with undulating flight sought another tree some thirty yards further on, renews his invitation. Keeping quite still and looking steadily you presently spy a little gray and black form moving along at a steady jog-trot; the tail is carried slightly above the level of the back, and the head, except when raised to glance up at the guide, is held a little low.

"'Every time the bird utters his monotonous refrain, which when translated into feathered language means, "Come along, come along, don't be so slow," the follower replies, "All right, my friend, don't be alarmed, I am coming." And thus the strange procession passes on out of sight to the hollow log where the unlucky insects are industriously slaving only ultimately to satisfy the appetites of bird and beast.'

"The favorite food of this badger is honeycomb and it has powerful claws with which to tear open the hive."

From his observations Mr. Chapin has come to believe that the guiding is instinctive, for it has become hereditary with at least one species of the bird and is practiced by old birds of both sexes and apparently by immature birds as well.

"The fact that it is a characteristic form of behavior throughout the whole range of the species," he says, "argues for its remote origin and leads us to believe that the instinct grew up slowly with the evolution of the family, though man is not always the beneficiary. The honey-guides must have preyed on bees long before savage man reached Africa, and we may speculate quite properly as to the origin of the guiding instinct."

Western Artist to Have Years of Wagon Travel

Seattle, Wash.—Sightseeing in a covered wagon, with "Chicago in two years" as the first goal, is the plan of Louis Dana Johnson, a local artist, who has left here with his family on a journey of five or six years.

In a trim gray prairie schooner, Betty Lou, aged two, plays under the shelter of the canvas. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and Barbara, aged eleven, hike along the highways. Mr. Johnson expects to "knock off a year" in Chicago to study art. He then will continue to "hit the trail" until he and his family tire of the novelty. The schooner, which he constructed, is fitted with everything necessary for a home and a school.

The Girl Who Sinned-to Save

Has every woman her price? When the life of a loved one is at stake, is there a degree of desperation, that over-rides every instinct of honor in a woman's soul?

In the November issue of True Story Magazine is the story of a girl who faced that tragic problem. Her bitterfight against the cruel conditions that threatened to destroy her soul—and her final triumph is one of the most heart-stirring, powerfully dramatic true-life stories ever told. It is entitled "A Modern Magdalen," and is only one of the great features in the November issue of True Story Magazine.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. (Adv.)

PEOPLE WOULD PAY IF RAILROADS WERE GOVERNMENT OWNED

Third Party Plan Would Take Revenue From States Involved.

If the railroads of the United States should be taken over, owned and operated by the government, the vast taxes now paid by the railroads would have to be paid by the people, according to Will R. Wood, member of congress from Indiana and chairman of the Republican National Congressional committee. Mr. Wood has made a careful analysis of the situation, noting the tax payments by the railroads to the several state governments last year.

If the roads were owned by the government they would be tax free just as the post offices now are. The states would still need the money, just as they do now, and as a result additional taxes would have to be levied on the citizens.

Mr. Wood's complete analysis follows:

"Robert M. LaFollette, the Socialist-third party candidate for President, is trying to convince 6,000,000 farmers that the surest cure for their ills is to bring about government ownership of all the railroads in the country; that, if this is done, transportation rates of all kinds would be immediately reduced.

"There are a lot of things, however, that would transpire if this scheme were carried out, that Senator LaFollette is woefully silent upon. He is not telling the farmers that the government pays no taxes on its properties and that it would pay no taxes on the railroads of the country if it owned them. He is not telling them that the railroads are paying into the various county and state treasuries of the United States more than $300,000,000 annually, which sum would have to be paid, in large part, by the farmers, once the government began the ownership of the railroads.

"Take the state of Wisconsin for instance: Last year the railroads paid the state of Wisconsin $7,321,976 in taxes. In the state of Minnesota the railroads paid, last year, a total tax to the state of $8,425,982. In Iowa they paid $6,849,703; in Kansas, $6,739,346; in Indiana, $13,094,627. In these five states alone the railroads paid $42,431,634 of the public tax burden. I have taken the figures in the above named states because they are largely agricultural and in the event that the government became the owner of the railroads of the country the farmers of these states would have to bear the greatest part of the burden in paying these additional taxes.

"In the state of Iowa if the LaFollette scheme were carried out, it would mean an increase of $32 in taxes annually levied against each farm in the state, or $2.80 for each man, woman and child in the state. In Kansas the burden would be $40 against each farm or $3.90 for each resident of that state. In Minnesota, where Mr. LaFollette is making a strong appeal for votes, he would take away from the farmer, under the government ownership plan, a tax income now paid by the railroads and place it as an additional assessment of $47 against each farm in the state, or $3.80 against each person residing in that commonwealth.

"I am told that, in one county in Montana, the total tax paid by the railroads amounts to 38.51 per cent of the entire levy. In midsummer of this year there was $104,102 of the total tax assessed in that county delinquent, upon which a penalty had been laid. This is convincing evidence that this county was already taxed much more than it was able to pay. Yet Mr. LaFollette would take away 38¼ per cent of the tax revenue of this county, now being paid by the railroads, and place it as an additional burden upon the individual taxpayer.

"In my own state of Indiana, the railroads pay $13,094,627 in taxes annually. The total tax of the state is $124,866,790. The railroads share of this tax is over 10 per cent. If Mr. LaFollette's scheme were put into effect, the individual taxpayer of Indiana would have to pay this additional sum of $13,094,627 each year. In Marion county the railroads pay annually $715,388 in taxes, a very substantial item in the total of the taxes paid in that county.

"The figures that I have given, applicable to the five agricultural states named, differ only in degree from those that might be given for every other state in the Union.

"Not only would the farmers be burdened by the payment of these additional taxes, should the government become the owners of the railroads, but they would also have an additional burden to bear, the size of which it is hard to ascertain, in the shape of deficits occurring in the operation of the railroads of the country for maintenance, extensions and upkeep.

"Some idea of what this burden would be, may be had, however, by recalling the experience during the period of government operation of the railroads under the management of William G. McAdoo, when the amount of the deficit over the earnings of those railroads taken over by the government was more than a million dollars a day, exclusive of the payment of exorbitant salaries to an army of officers.

"The farmers of this country, before they accept the panacea of government ownership of railroads, which is but a forerunner of the socialistic state, will do well to 'Stop, Look and Listen.'"

FORCED SHARK TO CARRY HIM ASHORE

Pearl Diver Rode Monster and Lived to Tell It.

There is a remarkable shark story in Mr. Frederick O'Brien's "Atolls of the Sun." An old pearl diver, addicted to rum, named Huri-Huri, was diving in the lagoon of Rangiroa, and a native thus describes his experience:

He was all alone in his canoe, and was in deep water. He had gone down several times, and had in his canoe four or five pairs of shells. He looked again and saw another pair, and plunged to the bottom. He had the shells in his sack and was leaving the bank when he saw, just above him, a shark so big that, as he said, it could have bitten him in half as a man eats a banana. The shark thrust down its nose toward Huri-Huri, and he took out his shells and held them against the beast. He kept its nose down for half a minute, but then was out of breath.

He was about to die, he believed, unless he could reach the air without the shark following him. He threw himself on the shark's back and put his hands in the fish's gills, and so stopped or partly stopped the shark's breathing. The shark did not know what to make of that, and hurried upward, headed for the surface by the diver. Huri-Huri was afraid to let go even there, because he knew the mao would turn on him and tear him to pieces. But he took several long breaths in the way a diver understands and still held on, and tore the shark's breathing places.

Now the shark was angry and puzzled, and so rushed to the bottom again, but with the man on his back. The shark had not been able to enjoy the air at the top because he breathes water and not air. Huri-Huri closed his gill openings, and piloted him, and so he came up again and again descended. By pulling at the gills the shark's head was brought up and he began to rise. All the time, Huri-Huri was thinking hard about God and his own evil life. He knew that each second might be his last one in life, and he prayed. He thought of Iona (Jonah), who was saved out of the shark's belly in the sea, when Christ was born, and he asked Iona to help him. . . .

Up and down they went for half an hour, the shark's blood pouring out over Huri-Huri's hand as he, minute after minute, tore at the gills. Now he could direct the shark any way, and often he guided him toward the beach of the lagoon. The shark would swim toward it, but when he felt the shallow water would turn. But after many minutes, the shark had to stay on top altogether, because he was too fat gone to dive, and finally Huri-Huri steered him right upon the sand. Huri-Huri fell off the mao (shark) and crawled up farther, out of reach of him. The fish could barely move his tail when the watchers on the shore reached it, and every bit of skin was rubbed off the diver's body, for the shark's body is as rough as a file, but the diver lived to become a deeply religious man.

SCHOOL DAYS

Mother's Cook Book

Never attempt to bear more than one kind of trouble at once. Some people bear three kinds—all they have had, all they have now and all they expect to have.—Edward Everett Hale.

HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS

A LARGE chicken is much more economical to buy than a small one, as the proportion of meat to bone is greater. After all the meat is removed, the bits too small to serve on the table may be used in a salad or a cream sauce on toast. The bones, with a stalk or two of celery, with an onion and a bit of carrot, covered with cold water and simmered for several hours, will make a most delicious soup. Cream, egg or rice may be added, or it may be served clear with croutons.

For the child who carries a lunch a sandwich or two, one for real nourishment and the other for a sweet, with a bit of seasonable fruit, will make a good meal and one easy to prepare on a busy morning.

Many a child has been taught to like tea or coffee by hur g the milk warmed by either of those beverages. This is a most pernicious habit to form. Milk may be warmed with hot water or heated milk may be given the child if a hot drink is desirable, but tea or coffee in any form should never be allowed. Weak tea or coffee is more harmful than a well-prepared concoction, some of our dietitians tell us, as the weak solution sets up a fermentation, causing sour stomach and other digestive disorders. The safe thing is to leave such beverages for older people who ought to be able to withstand such indulgence, if ill effects result from their use.

Everyday Cake.

Beat four tablespoonfuls of butter to a cream, add one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of chopped raisins, two egg yolks beaten light, one-fourth of a cupful each of maple and corn sirup, one-half cupful of milk; add one and three-fourths cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, half teaspoonful of soda, one-half teaspoonful each of salt and mace all sifted together. Add the stiffly-beaten whites of the eggs and turn into a shallow pan. Sprinkle with chopped nuts and dredge with sugar. Bake in a moderate oven about an hour. When a cake for a nice occasion is wanted, the following will be the one to prepare:

Onions With Cheese.

Cook even-sized onions until tender, place a layer in a baking dish, cover with a rich white sauce and a half-inch layer of finely-minced cheese; cover with another layer of onions and white sauce, sprinkle with buttered crumbs and place in a hot oven to thoroughly heat through and brown the crumbs.

Has a man like this proposed to you?

Symptoms: Looks like Teddy Roosevelt, but his teeth are less monumental and head-lightish. Has a bushy, brushy (short) fair moustache, but you can see his lips, which are keyed to fun and sympathy. Prosperous, generous, wholesome, tremendously well informed, jolly but, although older than you, is much of a kid.

Reflections of a Bachelor Girl

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHAT constitutes a "popular fellow": The ability to tell a good story—to men, and a good lie to a woman.

Every girl hitches her wagon to a star, in these days; but that never seems to prevent her from wanting a husband, if only as a parachute in case of disaster.

Advising a husband how to rule his wife or a wife how to manage her husband is deliberately juggling with T. N. T. But the world will always be full of intrepid "advisers," who keep the rest of us busy "picking up the pieces."

Nothing helps a woman's morale, in times of trouble, like a brand-new marcel, a freshly powdered nose, and an admiring glance from a good-looking stranger.

Between climbing onto a pedestal in order to reach a man's ideal, and having to step off of it, every now and then, in order to get down to his level, the average wife feels almost as though she were committing polygamy.

If a man were as careful about selecting a wife as he is about selecting a bootlegger, and as cautious about signing his name to a marriage certificate as he is about signing it to a check, there would be fewer sentimental bankrupts in the hands of the Reno receivers.

No matter what noble principles a man may stand for, his wife feels justified in secretly guarding him from any little pink and yellow thing that a less noble man might fall for.

Bachelors are the Bolsheviki of love; yet some of the finest husbands in the world have been made from bachelors, merely by a little denaturing—"extracting the kick."

Unless you are yearning for a martyr's crown, never ask a man if he loves you, when he is testing the new syphon, or trying to discover what makes the knock in the engine.

THE WHY, WHEN AND WHERE OF FASHIONS.

Why Prince of Wale Uses Three Ostrich Feathers on His Escutcheon.

Since the Prince of Wales achieved his unparalleled social success and aroused public interest in everything relating to him, many have wondered hom he happened to have the motto "Ich dien"—German for "I serve." The three ostrich feathers, serving as his escutcheon, have also aroused curiosity here, where heraldry is an almost forgotten thing.

It seems not unlikely, since ostrich is again fashionable, that use be made of this heraldic design, other than for court functions.

It is known, of course, that it is obligatory to wear three ostrich feathers in one's coiffure at a presentation at Buckingham Palace, and many and humorous have been the stories of the difficulties the shingled and bobbed have experienced in adjusting the regulation court headdress.

How it came about that the Prince of Wales adopted the three ostrich tips, all authorities do not agree, but according to prominent English historians, this motto and device takes us back to King John of Bohemia, who reigned 600 years ago. A brilliant soldier, this king made himself well known on the battlefields from Central Europe to northern Italy and France. When the French army met the English invaders on the fields of Crecy in 1346, King John, there to help the French, lost his life in battle. According to the story, Edward, known as the Black Prince, found the body of the fallen king and adopted as his own the motto "Ich dien" and the three feathers borne by his heroic foe.

This story seems to establish the significance of "feather in the cap," which is said originated in the middle ages in Hungary, where a warrior who vanquished a foe put a feather in his cap as a sign of victory.

Busses Reduce Trolley Costs

Brosseau Points Out Savings for Electric Lines—American Electric Railway Association Hears Automobile Leader on Coordinated Transportation.

Adoption of motor busses by electric railways will do more than any other measure to stabilize the trolley business and earn the good will of the public, in the opinion of A. J. Brosseau, a director of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, speaking before the American Electric Railway Association convention in Atlantic City yesterday.

Citing experiences of the United Electric Railways, Providence, the Pennsylvania-Ohio Electric Company, and elsewhere, the speaker outlined six profitable uses of the motor bus as linked with electric operation:

1. In thin traffic regions, where business does not warrant investment in railway equipment.
2. In heavy traffic areas to handle local passengers.
3. In light traffic hours when costs of power station operation can be saved
4. In developing new territory, as feeders to rail routes.
5. In city transportation, to meet public demand for bus service.
6. In inter-urban transportation, to meet public demand for bus service

"What I have in mind," said Mr Brosseau, "is the use of each form of transportation in its place and in the way which best suits the public's convenience and necessity

"There is a place for both types of vehicles, and if they are properly coordinated the result will be to the advantage of the transportation company, the rider, and the public

"The wise merchant finds out what sort of merchandise his customers want This is what has been done by the traction companies who have taken the bus into their system of transportation. They are meeting with a wide public appreciation which is reflected either in added income or lowered costs.

"I do not ask for special favors for the bus It will rise or fall on its own merits It should be granted no better and no worse treatment than is accorded to other forms of transportatin."

Romance Is on Wane in South Sea Islands

Papeete, Tahiti—Motion pictures and radio, jazz music, motorcars and bobbed hair have crowded out the old native customs of Tahiti, and some of the romance of the South seas would appear to be on the wane

Time was when July 14, the anniversary of the fall of the Bastile, was the great native festival of these islands There was singing and dancing contests among the native clans prepared for months in advance, and the competition for real excellence was keen This year only a few small and mediocre companies entered the contests, and interest was lacking The principal centers of attraction were the dancing pavilions along the waterfront, where jazz bands led the revelers in fox trots to a continuous flow of warm champagne.

Through the Glad Eyes of a Woman

By Jane Doe

WHAT EVERY WOMAN LOVES

SHE loves to be told once in a while that the older she gets the prettier she gets.

She likes to realize that her efforts to make one dollar do the work of two are thoroughly appreciated.

She adores being called "baby" or "lovey-dovey," even when she is over fifty.

* * *

She also adores being bossed occasionally and ordered to do things which she simply loves doing.

(For instance, making her husband apple-dumplings or kissing him behind his left ear.)

She loves to be told she is getting shabby, and that her husband is getting fed up with the sight of her best hat and would like to see her in another.

She adores having her husband refer to "My Wife" every time he commences a conversation.

She loves to know he carries her miniature in his watch and has a lock of her hair hidden amongst his private papers.

She likes to have a letter from him every day when he has to be away from home.

And she adores a good little cry now and again somewhere about the region of his shirt front, and having him wipe away the crocodile tears with a tobacco-smelly hanky.

She likes to hear him say sometimes, "Oh, let's eat downtown," and she loves to powder her nose and dress up to go with him.

* * *

And above all, she adores to realize that if her husband had the chance to be someone else he would always choose to be her second husband.

Reflections of a Bachelor Girl

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE average love affair begins with a kiss—of experiment, and ends with a sigh—of relief.

The attitude of a man toward a girl has changed from a plea to a dare—from "Let me kiss you!" to "Make me kiss you—if you can!"

Men, according to the modern girl's philosophy, are merely a side-line. Still, they are the only thing there is to flirt with, dance with, fall in love with or marry; and that's all they have to be, after all.

It is always blossom time in the heart of a woman who is loved—and always May time in the heart of a man who is in love.

Men have a funny code, all their own A cowpuncher is ashamed to be seen in an evening coat; an ex-bartender blushes to be caught serving soda water; and a married man hates to be caught buying flowers for his own wife Yet, all of these things are perfectly respectable.

Every man wants a woman to appeal to his higher nature and his finer instincts—and another woman to help him forget them.

When a man waits until five years after marriage to discover that his wife's cooking disagrees with him, or to pick flaws in her housekeeping, it is a sign that she should get some pretty new clothes, a new hairdresser, and a new beauty cream

MOTOR VEHICLE LAW

By Charles A Harnett Motor Vehicle Commissioner.

STOLEN CARS.

It is a common practice for persons stealing motor vehicles to change the engine number In order that thefts may be more easilyy detected the law has imposed certain restrictions against the change of engine numbers The following questions and answers bring out the provisions of the law

Q—When may a new engine be substituted for another in a registered motor vehicle?

A—Upon written permission of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles.

Q—What is the procedure in case an engine number is destroyed, removed, altered or defaced, or so covered as to be concealed?

A—The owner or lawful custodian of the motor vehicle may apply to the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles for a special engine number to be made or stamped on the engine If satisfied that the applicant is the true owner of the motor vehicle, and that the condition of the original engine number was not altered for any unlawful purpose, the commissioner shall issue to the applicant written permission to make or stamp on the engine a special engine number, designated by the commissioner of motor vehicles.

ALL-BRAN is a necessity!

When constipation is ripping the health out of your body, you can't afford to temporize! For health's sake—DON'T—when Kellogg's, because it is ALL BRAN, is guaranteed to give you positive, permanent relief!

Know the truth about bran! To be efficacious, to give you sought-for relief, bran must be ALL BRAN! Foods with a part bran content cannot be considered as a relief for constipation sufferers! These foods do not have the bulk or "roughage" to drive out the conditions that are undermining your health!

What you need for 100 per cent relief is 100 per cent bran, and that is what you get when you buy Kellogg's—IT IS ALL BRAN! And it is 100 per cent efficient, as your physician will tell you!

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, all cooked, krumbled and ready to eat, is delicious as a cereal or used in baking and cooking. Eat two tablespoonfuls daily, or as much with each meal in chronic cases—and rid yourself of constipation and the toxic poisons that lead to many of the most dreaded human ailments!

Heroic Struggle for Education He Coveted

The story is told of Kamba, a full-blooded African of the Ndau tribe, who has progressed from absolute illiteracy to a Columbia university degree. The first printing that he ever saw was on a pack of playing cards that came from the coast, and by studying these he taught himself the figures from one to ten. Later he went South to work, and an American missionary there who taught native boys in spite of the opposition of the Portuguese, whose policy is to keep the people ignorant, took him into his home as a house boy.

There the idea of that cultivated missionary, and especially his wife, [illegible] to live in that fever-stricken area for the sake of the black boys, gave him a new vision. He knew they must have some secret that made them different from all other white people he had ever seen.

When the American missionary left for home, he told his boys of a mission in Rhodesia, and Kamba walked 250 miles to reach there. His capacity and ambition for more education led the missionary to secure work for the boy by which he earned enough to go to Hampton Institute, Virginia.

Earning his living all the time, he took a course of carpentry and then went to Columbia, where he secured the coveted education. His whole ideal in seeking this education has been to go back and develop his own people, but not necessarily on western lines.

Fire Department Gets Inspection

Board of Fire Commissioners, Mayor Morris Block and City Officials Hold Inspection of Kingston's Paid Fire Department.

Thursday was "Inspection Day" of the Kingston fire department and all of the fire apparatus of the paid department and the paid firemen were inspected by the board of fire commissioners, Mayor Morris Block and city officials at the Central Fire Station that afternoon.

The inspection was held shortly after 2 o'clock and the four pieces of fire apparatus, two from the Central Station, one from Wiltwyck Hose Company and one from the Abeel street station, were lined up in front of the Central Fire Station on East O'Reily street and a photograph taken of the members of the paid fire department, the fire board, Mayor Block, city officials and the apparatus.

Among the visitors to the Central Fire Station were Secretary Louis S. Coe of the Chamber of Commerce, Superintendent of Schools M. J. Michael, former Fire Commissioner Andrew J. Murphy, Alderman J. Philip Beichert, former president of the Hudson River Valley Volunteer Firemen's Association; and Scout Executive G Henry Nesslage.

President Charles Lahl, Commissioners William S. Eltinge and Louis H. Kolls, Raymond Whitbeck, clerk of the board, and Mayor Block thoroughly inspected the equipment and apparatus and found everything in fine order.

Under the direction of Marshall Miller, superintendent of the fire alarm system, the system was inspected and found in excellent working order. The system is installed in the rear of the Central Fire Station in an addition that was recently completed It formerly was located on the third floor of the city hall, but the present fire board had the building erected which now houses the equipment.

The inspection brought out the fact that Kingston has one of the finest paid fire departments of any city its size in this section of the state.

DOES YOUR WINTER COAT FLARE?

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

The institution of fur as a trimming rather than as the basic material of the winter coat is, strictly speaking, not new; but its emphasis this season leaves the average woman in a quandary as to whether to invest in an all-fur coat, or one which is merely fur trimmed.

So lavishly is fur used on the smartest coats that there is little or no difference in the expenditure involved.

The coat sketched is typical of the new mode—which exploits the flare in fur. Such coats are chosen by women who are alive to the after influences of the flare, now almost in its infancy.

Among the furs used must be mentioned dyed fitch—and natural fitch—for that matter—and, of course, leopard, which has already been accorded considerable publicity, justified by its great popularity. Heretofore there existed, perhaps, a feeling that leopard and all furs of the wildcat family belonged to sports, but this fall finds leopard trimming coats of a distinctly formal genre, and finds velvets and even crepes printed in imitation of the leopard spots, which nobody seems desirous of changing—unless it might be the leopard, since because of his beautiful marking, he is so often called upon to sacrifice his pelt, which, of course, means his life as well.

No animal which has a fur capable of being dyed brown, and serving as a trimming, is safe these days. Paris offers beaver and nutria to an already long list of furs, the preference being decidedly for brown.

Republican Women Leaders Drawing Plans For Getting Out A Record Vote For Coolidge And Dawes In November

After women secured the long-denied right of suffrage, there were some who thought they would organize in a great group and use their power as an independent unit. The belief was unfounded. Experience has shown that the new power is being exercised through the existing political parties.

The picture above shows a group of prominent Republican women leaders conferring in New York headquarters of the Republican National Committee. Seated at the end of the table is Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, of Kentucky, Vice-Chairman of the Republican National Committee, who is in command of the activities of the army of women throughout the United States working for the success of President Coolidge and Gen. Dawes.

With but one exception, all of these women political leaders are members for their states of the Republican National Committee. Seated at the table, farthest away from Mrs. Hert, is Mrs. J. G. M. Glessner, representing New Hampshire, vice-president of the Society of Colonial Dames in her state. She was state chairman of ways and means in the Harding-Coolidge campaign four years ago.

Seated next to her is Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, of Massachusetts. Mrs. Bird was president of the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association when the suffrage amendment to the Constitution was passed. She then organized the Republican women of her state and was chairman of the women's division of the Republican State Committee throughout the 1920 campaign. President Harding appointed her to represent the eastern states on the advisory council during the Conference for the Limitations of Armaments. She founded the Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts and was its first president.

Next to Mrs. Bird is Mrs. Charles Steedman of Rhode Island, a daughter of Henry Lippitt, governor of Rhode Island from 1875 to 1877. She headed the American Red Cross in Providence during the World War, and was a member of the first Republican Women's State Committee. Mrs. Steedman is a member of the Society of Colonial Dames.

Seated on the other side of Mrs. Hert is Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, the daughter of Paul Morton, Secretary of the Navy in the Roosevelt cabinet, and wife of the well known banker of New York. Mrs. Sabin is president of the Women's National Republican Club of New York City, and was a delegate-at-large to the convention which named Coolidge and Dawes.

Standing in front of the pillar is Mrs. J. B. Russ, of Connecticut, president of the Connecticut unit of Coolidge Women's Clubs of America. Standing immediately behind Mrs. Hert is Mrs. W. Bladen Lowndes, of Maryland. She was chairman of the Liberty Loan and War Savings Committee of Howard County and a member of the National Council of Defense during the war. She was chairman also of the War Savings Campaign in Baltimore, which is her home. Her husband is a son of the late Governor Lloyd Lowndes of Maryland. Behind Mrs. Sabin stands Mrs. Charlotte Farrar of New York City, Republican woman leader of the Tenth Assembly District. She is now and was four years ago an active worker at New York City headquarters. She is the only one of those pictured above who is not a National Committeewoman.

Rally Sunday at ComforterChurch

Sunday, October 12, will be observed as Rally Day at the Church of the Comforter at all of the services. The pastor will preach an appropriate sermon at the morning service and all the young people and older members of the parish are urged to attend. In the evening Miss Ada Ammerman of New York city, dramatic reader and impersonator will give the Bible story of Joseph. It will be recited word for word from the Bible, but with forceful, dramatic rendition and character impersonations. It will take the place of the sermon and is expected to be of inestimable value to the young people as well as to those who are older. The young people of the Bible school, the members of the parish and the public are invited to hear this interpretation of this very interesting Bible story.

On Monday evening, October 13th, Miss Ammerman will give a clever, bright, refined program, consisting of dialect stories, monologues, pianologues, etc. It will be a program of great variety with character impersonations and many humorous selections. This entertainment is given under the auspices of Circle No. 2 of the Ladies' Aid Society. The price of admission is nominal. After the program, ice cream and home made cake will be served at a small additional price.

EDINBURGH REVIEW.

The first number of the Edinburgh Review was published 122 years ago today by Francis Jefferys, the Rev. Sydney Smith, Henry Brougham, and other high Whigs. The purpose was not to make money but rather to mold public opinion. Constable undertook the role of publisher under an agreement whereby the writers were to obtain no payment until after three numbers had been issued. The plan was so successful that after the first number the editors and contributors were well remunerated. Jeffrey, who has been called the "greatest of all magazine editors," was placed in absolute control of the Review's policy, and he gave to the publication an influence that extended all over the English-speaking world.

QUEEN CHRISTINA, OF SWEDEN.

Gustavus Adolphus, the heroic king of Sweden was succeeded at his death in 1632 by his daughter, Christina. This princess, having reigned as gloriously as her father had fought, astonished all Europe by abdicating at the age of 27 years. It was certainly a strange event, one which she repented of later. Her design in quitting the throne was that she might have time to gratify her taste for the Fine Arts, also she desired to live in Italy, the home of the arts, and she furthermore became a Roman Catholic. She did not derive much joy out of her descent into private life. The great stain upon her life was the murder of her equorry, Monaldehchi, which, it is alleged, she caused to be perpetrated, in a barbarous manner in her own presence, during the second journey to France. During the 35 years of her Ex-Queenship her conduct was marked by many eccentricities, the result of an almost insane vanity.

THE FOUNDING OF CANADA.

This is the sixtieth anniversary of the gathering of "The Fathers of the Canadian Federation" in the city of Quebec.

Here they began that memorable conference which resulted in the union of the Provinces. It was on October tenth, 1864, that the delegates assembled in the ancient capital to continue the discussions already initiated at a preliminary conference in Charlottestown.

Sir E. P. Tache, a French-Canadian statesman was unanimously chosen chairman. John A. MacDonald was one of the foremost figures present, and George E. Cartier was spokesman for the Conservatives of Quebec.

Other big men of the convention were Thomas D'Arcy McGee, a clever and eloquent Irishman, Alexander T. Galt, George Brown, Hector L. Langewin and Jean C. Chapais. Charles Tupper headed the Nova Scotia delegation and Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland sent their best men. The two latter Provinces elected to remain out of the union, but in 73 Messrs. Pope and Haviland went to Ottawa and arranged the terms by which the baby Province was admitted to full sisterhood in the confederation.

Jewelry From Hard Coal

Polished hard coal as a substitute for jet in the production of rings, necklaces, watch fobs, ornamental hat trimmings and similar articles, is being experimented with by a German inventor. Selected hard coal is used and after the substance is cut as near to the required dimensions as possible, it is finished off with fine files and then polished. Monogram rings inscribed with initials inlaid in white enamel present a smart appearance, and few are said to be able to guess the nature of the substitute.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Cheaper to Marry a Cook

By MARTHA WILLIAMS

(Copyright.)

THERE was apology in Benson's closing of the green gate. He went almost slinkingly up the brick walk, hesitated before the side path that ran to the back. But cautious as was his approach he was not surprising those within. Miss Jemmy, peering through a crack in the shutters, sniffed scornfully:

"I do wish you'd look at—that! Wonder what he's after now!"

"He won't get it—no matter what it may be," Marianne, her niece, interrupted, sticking out an obstinate chin.

Miss Jemmy giggled. "I'm a-wonderin' which of us he'll ask first! Wife's what he's really after. Reckon it depends on who sees him first."

"Maybe—then you're elected. I'm going outside—and stay till I hear you setting Ginger-Cake on him," Marianne flung back—to an accompaniment of faint rapping on the screen door. Benson had carefully overlooked the door to the narrow entry, also that to the back piazza, in favor of the rearmost opening. How should he know, poor soul, that Ginger-Cake, the sleepless guardian of the Martins and their belongings, lay just inside, nose between paws, eyes batting sleepily, but for all that, as ready for action as a hornet's nest.

"Lawsy mercy me! If it ain't Jud Benson!" Miss Jemmy cried, flinging open the door, unnoting Ginger-Cake's sudden leap to attention. She began to say: "Come right in." But Ginger-Cake had another mind. Out he shot as though from a catapult, flung himself upon Benson, floored him, and held him fast, the while looking over his shoulder at Miss Jemmy, as though asking: "Now what shall I do with it?"

When she said, "Let go, you fool dog!" he released his catch and slunk away. Miss Jemmy, all concern, helped Benson up and took him solicitously inside.

Benson settled himself firmly, hands on knees, eyes fixed on a knothole in the piazza floor, and buzzed on: "Miss Jemmy, you see a desprit man. Three months since Sarah passed on—seems like three years, each longer, and blacker, and wusser than the other. Think o' me—all ter my lone in that big house—with nineteen cows in the barn, all to be milked and done for—and nobody but me to keep help up to the mark. Not a decent meal o' vittles, except what I've sneaked offen my neighbors—women wuth while won't come ter cook in a house with jest a man in it—and them that ain't wuth while makes things a heap wuss. I'm willin' ter pay—the good Lord knows! Why, I'd give anybody as much as twenty dollars a month ter come and do fer me—and look after the milk things, special the separator and strainers."

"H'm! Yes!" Miss Jemmy interrupted. "But—where've you been these last few years? How come you don't know what real cooks can ask—and get, with thanks? A hundred a month, if you please—and sometimes, twice that. You haven't said so right out flat—but I reckon you're thinkin' it'll be cheaper to marry a cook, nurse and seamstress than to hire one. Maybe you're right—but lemme tell you—to get a woman of any sense or judgment, you'll have to go where nobody's ever heard of you. Lemme tell you, too, ef you had spent money on a live Sarah as you did on a dead one—casket with silver trimmin's, satin linin', paid choir, and a town preacher to tell all he didn't know about her—it's my judgment you'd have heap better chances of heaven—and matrimony."

"Sarah—never—complained," Benson all but whimpered.

"No—she wasn't that sort," from Miss Jemmy stoutly. "You wouldn't let her keep her sister's orphans—rather put 'em in the 'sylum! You ought to feel yourself same as a murderer—"

She had gone too far. The cowering Benson leaped at her, caught her shoulders, and shook her. Rescue came swiftly—in shape of Marianne, Ginger-Cake and a tall young stranger of fine open countenance, but shadowed eyes. Ginger-Cake accounted for Benson. As that person sank heavily into a chair, Marianne said to the stranger:

"There is—the person you came to see," then to Miss Jemmy: "I found him on the road—and brought him—just in time, it seems."

Miss Jemmy, not quite steady of voice, said slowly: "I see—you are poor Sarah Benson's nephew she wanted to see so bad—"

"I got the letter two days ago—too late," the young fellow answered swallowing hard.

Benson suddenly looked up, tried to rise, fell back with a hoarse cry, all one burly side of him stricken helpless.

He lived thus a year—with Sarah's nephew his stay and comfort. His coming was a real providence, said Miss Jemmy. All the more heartily when he proved to be Benson's sole heir—and fell handsomely in love with Marianne, who had guided him to fortune and happiness.

Style

Styles change from year to year. But certain women are always smart looking and well poised no matter what the season's silhouette, because they wear corsets and brassieres which keep the figure youthful without imposing stiffness and restriction.

Model 382
Price $5.00

Freedom

One of the lightly boned corsets which is very popular this season is illustrated here. Model 382. It has a low comfortable elastic top, one and one-half inches above the waistline. The medium length skirt is cut straight around the figure. There is a two-inch elastic section at the back.

Comfort

Model 789 is for the stout figure. It is extremely low under the bust and at the front, graduating to medium high back. To give much needed fullness for comfort when seated, a curved section is inserted under the bust.

Model 789
Price $9.50

Support

Attracting favorable attention is the new soft front which Gossards are introducing this year. It gives a flat abdomen without any restriction over digestive organs.

Republican Work To Better Marketing Conditions Wins Women's Approbation

FARM WOMEN WHO PRODUCE AND TOWN AND CITY WOMEN WHO BUY ARE JOINT BENEFICIARIES OF NEW PLANK IN PLATFORM

This is the fifth of a series of five articles by Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, vice-chairman of the Republican National Committee, and chairman of the Women's Division of that committee. Mrs. Hert discusses what she considers vital campaign issues from the woman's standpoint.

BY MRS. ALVIN T. HERT

Not alone do the women on the farms who have been hindered by poor facilities for marketing the milk, butter, eggs, fruit and vegetables which they have produced with so many hours of labor, but the women in the towns and cities of this country who buy these products approve of the activities of the Republican administration to bring about better marketing conditions.

Marketing has been the most difficult problem for the farmer's wife as well as for the farmer. To work from daybreak to dusk, to produce bountiful crops and then when they are gathered to find that there is no market for them or that the market is so inaccessible as to make it impossible for the products to be taken to it has often been the poor reward of the men and women on farms. A thrifty farmer's wife feels that she must produce only what she is able to sell, for waste is abhorrent to her. No matter how thrifty she is, however, she is often hampered by our poor marketing system. It is the duty of the government to improve this system. There is always a demand for dairy products and fruit and vegetables. More than one-half of our population now lives in towns and cities. The great problem is to get the products from the farm to the city consumer.

A plan whereby a group of neighbors may market their products together means a saving of both time and money to the farmer's wife.

Until February, 1922 there was no federal law recognizing marketing associations. Co-operative marketing associations, it is true, had grown up in many states, but these associations had no right to engage in interstate or foreign commerce. For this reason and for the purpose of giving further encouragement to the organization of such association by the farmers of this country, the Republican Congress passed the co-operating marketing association act.

This law gives to men and women on the farms the right to form associations for collecting, preparing and marketing their output and to sell their products outside their states and to foreign countries wherever they find available markets.

It was because of the belief of the Republican party that the greatest problem of the farmer was in distribution and marketing, that in its platform drawn up at its national convention in Cleveland, in June it promises every assistance to the re-organization of the marketing system on sounder and more economic lines. It went on record also as in favor of a federal system of organization for co-operative marketing of farm products. It does not advocate the government going into business but it advocates government aid to enable the farmers themselves to organize such a federal system.

Of great assistance to the women on the farms has been the Department of Agriculture under the direction of Secretary Wallace. In establishing the Bureau of Home Economics and placing it on an equal footing with all other separate bureaus of the Department of Agriculture Secretary Wallace recognized the need of broader studies of the problems of the home.

The Republican party has been the party which has stood by the farmers in the days of their adversity. The Republican party knows that in the farms and the men and women on the farms rests our hope for national advancement and prosperity.

Family Medicine Cabinet Danger

Left-Overs Should Not Be Treasured—Danger Lurks in Unlabelled Bottles—Read Labels First—What the Cabinet Should Contain.

Dr. Matthias Nicoll, Jr., state commissioner of health, broadcast a talk on "The Family Medicine Cabinet," from Station WGY—Schenectady, several nights ago.

Dr. Nicoll advised every one immediately to take stock and throw out the useless medical and surgical materials which usually accumulate in the course of time. He called attention to the uselessness of treasuring the remains of medicines which are left after a person has recovered from an illness, and stated that what the doctor prescribed for one condition is not intended for some one else suffering with what may seem to be a similar complaint.

After stating what every family should have on hand in the way of simple medical and surgical supplies, Dr. Nicoll took occasion to warn against the habit of taking coal tar drugs for the relief of headache. Most of these, he said, are heart depressants and not without danger.

"There are," said Dr. Nicoll, "certain articles which every one should keep on hand for emergency use. You should always have some absorbent cotton in sealed packages, and a package of wooden toothpicks, which are of use in making cotton brushes. To do this lay the end of a toothpick on a pinch of cotton held between the thumb and finger of the left hand; twist the toothpick with the right hand, and the result is a neat swab or brush which may be thrown after once using it. Sterile cotton bandages of one and two inch widths are always useful. Zinc oxide adhesive plaster has many uses, but the size most frequently found in homes is too small; a more convenient size is a five yard roll, one and one-half inches wide; this can easily be cut into narrower widths when desired. Besides cotton and bandages, sterile gauze has many uses, and may also be obtained in sealed packages. Remember that none of these articles in sealed packages remains surgically clean after the package has once been opened. For skin irritations, chafing, sunburn, etc., powdered zinc stearate is useful, and may be purchased in a can with a shaker top.

"There are two remedies for external use which should be in every home medical cabinet. First there should be a small bottle of tincture of iodine, which may be applied as a disinfectant to all cuts and lacerations, and whenever the skin is broken. It is best applied with a cotton brush and should not be poured on the surface. Nor are bandages to be soaked with iodine as it may cause severe blistering if used in this way. As tincture of iodine is poisonous when taken internally it should always be kept in a distinctive type of bottle, such as one with knobs or sharp projections on it, which one can not help but feel as soon as the bottle is grasped. The second remedy for external use, which is of value is boric acid solution—a teaspoonful to a pint of water. This can be used as a wet dressing for wounds, and can also be used as an eye wash or a mouth wash.

"Bichloride of mercury and carbolic acid have no place in the family medicine cabinet; they serve no purpose which is not equally well met with tincture of iodine. They are both highly poisonous drugs, and tablets of the former are frequently mistaken for other tablets which are intended for internal use. Many tragic accidents have occurred in just this way.

"Of the medicine for internal use, the ordinary household needs may be met by very few. These are castor oil, aromatic extract of cascara, sodium bicarbonate, sweet spirits of nitre and aromatic spirits of ammonia. As an ordinary laxative a teaspoonful of the aromatic extract of cascara at night is sufficient; castor oil should be reserved for such times as a thorough and vigorous internal housecleaning is desired. Sodium bicarbonate, or baking soda—a teaspoonful in a glass of hot water—will often relieve acid stomach or so-called heartburn. This drug is also useful for the relief of burns—by applying sterile gauze soaked in a saturated solution of the drug (made by adding the soda to water until no more will dissolve). Sweet spirits of nitre is used to reduce fever. When such a condition exists give fifteen drops of the medicine every two or three hours in a little water. In the meantime, however, always send for a physician for only he can determine what is the cause of the fever. Aromatic spirits of ammonia should be in every medicine cabinet. When a temporary stimulant is required a half teaspoonful in a half glass of water should be given and if in doubt as to the cause of the trouble the doctor should be called.

"The materials and drugs which I have mentioned include all of the essentials for the family medicine cabinet. With them, almost any emergency can be dealt with. However, consult your family physician who will advise you further. His knowledge of you and your family makes him peculiarly competent to recommend additional remedies to meet possible or probable individual conditions.

"Finally, there are two precautions every one should take. First never keep any bottle or box of medicine which isn't distinctly labelled. Second, always keep your hands behind you, and read every label before you remove any medicine from the cabinet. If very one will do these two things many accidents will be avoided."

Life Without Friendship

It is like taking the sun out of the world to bereave human life of friendship, than which the immortal gods have given man nothing better, nothing more gladdening.—Cicero.

HAVE CURIOUS WAYS OF DESCRIBING TIME

Primitive People Sometimes Use Puzzling Expressions.

The first time you begin to interrogate a New Hebridean about the time a thing happens in the night, he will puzzle you by pointing up into the sky. Then an old stager will tell you that he is pointing to the spot which the sun would have reached had it been daytime—a good idea, in a land where clocks are unimagined.

"My son will be back in a quid-chew," declares the Javanese, meaning five minutes, the time it takes to chew a quid of sirih. After waiting half an hour you return and say, "It is now 'kay,' cooking time (the time it takes to cook a 'kay' of rice), and he is not here." "Sorry," says the native; 'he has sent a message that he cannot be here until a 'gangtang' cooking time" (the time it takes to cook a "gangtang" of rice, about 90 minutes).

"The lion came in the silence of the land," explains the African Babwende race, meaning at midnight.

An exasperating custom of the Bismarck islanders is to tell you that a thing happened as long ago as it takes to walk from some place you have never heard of to another place you have never heard of. In one village the standard expression for four hours was the time that it took a lame old woman to hobble half way to the other side of the island. That was as clear as any clock-reading to the villagers, who had known the old lady for years—but it didn't help the stranger much!

Some tropical races say, "That happened just before the turning of the smoke." Along the coast a stiff wind suddenly blows in from the sea shortly before sunset.

The natives of Madagascar have one of the jolliest primitive time systems. Midnight they call Center of Night; 2 a. m. is Frog-croaking; 5:15 a. m. is Glimmer of Day; 5:30 a. m. is Unlazy People Awake; 6 a. m. is Sunrise; 6:15 a. m. is Cattle Go Out; 6:30 a. m. is Leaves Are Dry; 9 a. m is Sun Over Eaves; 12 noon is Sun Over Roof Ridge; 2 p. m. is Day Slips; and so it goes in detail until 9:30 p. m. which is Everyone in Bed.

The Nandi, an African race, have a rather similar toll of hours, puzzling at first to the newcomer, but as clear to themselves as any numbered hours to us. A Nandi afternoon runs thus: Noon, the Sun Has Stood Upright; 12:30 p. m., the Goats Have Drunk Water; 1 p. m., the Sun Turns; 1:30 p. m., the Drones Hum; 2 p. m., the Oxen Feed; 3 p. m., the Goats Have Drunk Water; 1 p. m., the Oxen Are Watered a Second Time; 4:30 p. m., the Goats Sleep; 5 p. m., Take Goats Home; 5:30 p. m., Goats Enter Kraal; 6 p. m., Sun Finished; 6:15 p. m., Milk Cows; 6:45 p. m., Can't See Man Nor Beast; 7 p. m., the Heavens Are Fastened; 8 p. m., Porridge Is Finished; 9 p. m., Those Who Have Drunk Milk Are Asleep; 10 p. m., the Huts Are Closed; 11 p. m., Those Who Sleep Early Wake Up; and 12 is Night's Middle.—Manchester Guardian.

Narrow Escape

Karl Hoblitzelle, president of the Interstate Amusement company, who is in Houston for a few days, tells of meeting a very absent-minded old man, who came to visit the Dallas Majestic. He talked with Mr. Hoblitzelle for a while, and then after looking all over the theater, said he would journey on.

A minute later he returned, evidently much worried. "I have mislaid my hat. Has anyone in this office seen it?" he asked.

"Why, it's on your head," said Mr. Hoblitzelle, pointing.

"Gracious," said the old man. "I nearly went off without it."—Houston Post.

Leading Question

Mrs. Dean Bond, librarian of the Indiana State Normal school, has a keen sense of humor. The other day she watched a young man hunting through the book stacks for a book. He was heard to ask another young man for the book for which he was hunting.

It was called "Good English."

He asked for it in this manner: "Have you ever heard 'Good English?'"

Mrs. Bond laughed. But she laughed still harder when the fellow came to her and asked: "Do you know 'Good English'?"—Indianapolis News.

More Corn Now

It took 80 rows of corn to make a wagonload three years ago from a field on the farm of V. H. Price of Tipton county, Tenn. But for three years this farmer has been demonstrating soil building through growing legumes, in co-operating with the county agricultural agent, planting lespedeza and following with corn and soy beans. In 1923, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, only 20 rows of corn from this field were needed to make a wagonload.

Pies by Machinery

A newly patented mixing machine turns out pies at the rate of fifteen a minute, "never touched by human hands." After the tins are lined with crust, trimmed and crimped on the edges, they are passed along to reservoirs containing different kinds of filler and automatically stopped to receive the kind of material desired. Then they are passed along to the oven. The finished product is known as an "open-face pie."

Expectations Vary

Some expect pearls with their bivalves. Others are glad enough to find the shells well supplied with oysters.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

DO IT NOW.

Big Excursion To Newburgh

Present reports indicate the aim of Newburgh Council to have 10,000 members in line on the occasion of the parade which will mark the 25th anniversary of the Newburgh Council, Knights of Columbus, on October 12, will be exceeded and that 15,000 is a more likely figure. The day gives promise of bringing more strangers to the city than any occasion since the Hudson-Fulton celebration in 1909. In addition to the New York Councils, several organizations from New Jersey and Pennsylvania will be present.

Kingston Council, No. 275, will run an excursion on the steamer Homer Ramsdell. The local council will be accompanied by the Citizens' Band.

The boat will leave the Central Hudson dock on Sunday morning at 9:45 o'clock, returning from Newburgh at 7 o'clock in the evening. An invitation is extended to all to enjoy the trip. Tickets may be had at O'Reilly news stores on Broadway and John street, Murphy's news store, Strand, and Sheppard's news store, Broadway, or at the K. of C. Building.

PROGRESS OF NEW HIGHWAY CONSTRUCTION

The following bulletin shows the highway construction accomplished during the week ending October 3, 1924.

Number of contracts under way, 203.

Number of pavements being laid, 93.

Number of men employed by contractors, 7,519.

Square yards of pavement completed during season, 4,374,598.

Maintenance force employed by the state, 4,527.

The above yardage represents 18.97 miles of completed pavement for the week and a total of 429.33 miles for the season.

The yardage of pavement laid during the past week is 100,000 square yards lower than the previous week due to the recent rains throughout the state.

Total annual construction and reconstruction to date as compared with preceeding years:

1922. Miles of pavement.....385.0
1923. Miles of pavement.....393.0
1924. Miles of pavement.....428.0

PREPARING FOR BAZAAR AT EPWORTH HALL

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church is pushing to completion its plans for the bazaar and suppers which will be held at Epworth Hall, October 28 to 29. Among the various committees which are working hard to make this bazaar a success, is the domestic committee, which has charge of the domestic booth, where they will dispose of household articles. The ladies of this booth as well as the other booths, are anxious to have a large and beautiful display, therefore they urge all persons who have expressed a desire to contribute to the domestic booth, to have their gifts at the church parsonage at 123 Clinton avenue, not later than October 15. There will be a supper served each evening.

WHY THIN FOLKS HAVE WEAK BLOOD

A Quick Way To Build Up

Thin folks don't go around looking pale and drawn as though the life had all gone out of you! Scientists have now found a way to put more red and strength into the blood at the same time you are putting on flesh and weight.

And here's how it is done—go to any druggist and ask for Burke's Cod Liver Oil and Iron in tablet form. In a day or two you'll find you are eating more, the angular hollows will begin to fill out, the blood being greatly enriched will quickly show the color of health and vigor in your face.

This sugar coated tablet containing the purest Cod Liver Oil and blood making iron is pleasant to take—no fishy nauseous taste. In order to guard against cheap imitations be sure to specify Burke's Cod Liver Oil and Iron Tablets. Don't forget to use the word Iron. Every druggist sells a two weeks treatment for $1.00—the most economical way to buy.

Converse Kin Give Harvard $475,000

MRS E. C. CONVERSE

Mrs. E. C. Converse, of New York City, widow of one of the multi-millionaire founders of the United States Steel Corporation, with her two daughters and son, donated $475,000 for the erection of a chemical research laboratory at Harvard University as a memorial to the late Mr. Converse.

Cave That Furnished Solomon With Stone

Solomon's cave, an old quarry from which the stone was taken to build Solomon's temple, is situated just outside of Jerusalem, in the hills of Judea. All that is left of the temple is the idea embodied in a model of it. On its site stands the Mosque of Omar. But the cave remains unchanged, its walls echoing voices from out the ages and bearing testimony to the foundation of a grand and glorious temple which symbolized as well as dated the foundation of the Masonic lodge, says a writer in the Christian Science Monitor.

In the early days the laws of religion and philosophy and those of architecture were very closely united in thought, and it was held that these laws were secrets to be known only to the few. The working tools of the builder became emblems of moral truth and the arts and crafts were secrets jealously guarded. There must have been a secret order of architects who built the Temple of Solomon, and who opened friendly commercial relations with foreign nations, making of the organization an international fraternity. Great material help was given by Hiram I of Tyre and the society of Phoenician architects in the construction of the temple.

When Diocletian began his reign he determined to destroy Christianity and began the persecution of all religious secret orders. For a time the builders, owing to their value and services to the state, were exempt from these laws of suppression and enjoyed special privileges, but gradually they were forced into more and more secrecy, taking refuge in caves and secluded places to hold their meetings.

Pygmy Victim of Act of Mistaken Kindness

In 1904, after the St. Louis exposition, one of the African pygmies exhibited there was stranded in New York on his way home. He finally got a job in a Coney Island restaurant, but soon lost it, and was near starvation when a person interested in his plight asked Dr. W. T. Hornaday, curator of the zoo, to give him work, says the Boston Transcript. The pygmy was set to work cleaning and tending the monkey cage, and later was promoted to the bear cage. He was happy and cheerful, but so slow that it took him half a day to clean the cage. It was not long before he became an object of greater interest than either the bears or monkeys, and an ingenious person conceived the idea of placing a sign on the front of the cage during the hours he spent there, announcing that he was a specimen of homo sapiens.

The fellow was not left untroubled long, however, for the New York Times learned of the practice and started righteous agitation against such indignity to a poor pygmy—and thus to the human race—and quickly interested the negro welfare societies. At their protest he was discharged and, after wandering southward from one ill treatment to another, he committed suicide.

Javanese Clever

The Javanese natives have a great love for music. Some of their musical instruments are very ingenious in appearance and pleasant to listen to. One of them, which is called a gamelan, is a sort of native orchestra, composed chiefly of gongs sounded in various cadences so as to produce a very sweet melody, with an accompaniment of wind and string instruments. A bamboo instrument called the anklung is also very popular. This is shaken by hand and gives forth a sprightly rhythm of which the natives are very fond. The music is played in the open air and is frequently the accompaniment to entertainments at which the age-old stories of the island are told. The Javanese also excel in work in copper and gold, although, having none of their own, they have to import their raw materials.

Amazon Valley Is Greatest

Although the Mississippi valley is quite often spoken of as the largest valley drained by a river, its area is scarcely more than half as large as the valley drained by the Amazon river. The Mississippi river valley embraces 1,243,600 square miles, while that of the Amazon ranges over 2,330,000 square miles.

Think of it!

D. W. Griffith's "America," a romantic story after the style of Walter Scott's Ivanhoe. A thrilling drama of love and romance by Robert W. Chambers.

The story of the sacrifice made by our forefathers during the Revolution is romantic, inspiring and thrilling beyond description.

Through this story is interwoven a beautiful romance. Harriette Underhill in the Tribune says "a great love story."

It is also absolutely correct historically.

SEE the beginnings and causes that made necessary a great sacrifice!

SEE the gorgeous scenes in the Court of King George III!

SEE the old house of Burgesses in Virginia, where sat Washington, Patrick Henry and Jefferson, the founders of our Republic!

SEE the magnificent ride of Paul Revere, said by New York Herald, to be the most thrilling scene ever filmed!

SEE the gathering of the American patriots at Lexington and Concord. 77 Americans standing against 800 British Regulars at Lexington.

SEE the magnificent Valley Forge!

SEE the surrender of Cornwallis, and the inauguration of the first President of the United States!

SEE the assault on Fort Sacrifice and the rescue of the Americans by Washington's unit, the "Liberty or Death" brigade of Morgan's Rifles.

Holds Tidal Record

In the Bay of Fundy, New Brunswick, the world's highest tides are recorded. Here they often reach as high as 100 feet. On the other hand, the coast of Ireland, at Arklow, there is no perceptible tide at all, and scientists are making constant study to ascertain the reason for this variation.

Tribe Dying Out

A puzzling disease similar to leprosy is gradually exterminating the Slocani Indians in the Findlay river district in northwestern Canada. Less than 200 natives of the tribe are left out of the 1,000 that lived a few years ago. Medical authorities are unable to find a cure for the disease.

JAPANESE NORTHLAND

Ainu Chieftain With Tanbark Headdress.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Japan's sunny southern islands with their mild climate furnish the common conception of the empire of the Rising Sun. One hears little ordinarily of the Japanese northland. This neglected portion of the empire, however, has been dramatically uncovered for the world by the American round-the-world flyers, the first international travelers of note to approach Japan through her northern "back door."

Japan's northland includes Hokkaido or Yezo, the northernmost of the main island group, a unit almost as big as Cuba; Saghalien, near the Siberian coast, bone of contention between Japan and Russia; and the Kuriles, the chain of little volcanic islands reaching far to the north, over which the American flyers skimmed after they left the American Aleutians.

Before western influence reached Japan the Japanese kept pretty closely to their balmy southern lands, and had only a tenuous hold on Yezo. They barely knew of the existence of the more northern islands. The rulers of Japan hardly seemed to consider even Yezo a real part of their domains until Russians began to trespass toward the close of the Eighteenth century. When this situation arose officials were sent by the shogun to govern the islands. For a long time Yezo was left almost entirely to the Ainus, the Caucasian-like natives, as far as permanent habitations were concerned.

During this period the Japanese treated this island as a sort of national, commonly owned fishing preserve. Fleets of fishing boats swarmed along its coasts in the summer, the fishermen making temporary camps, but the winter found all of them back south in "Old Japan." This matter of climate furnishes one chief key to the Japanese neglect of the northern islands. The race developed under the mild climatic conditions of the South. All their customs and habits were built in such a climate. They became accustomed to light clothing, mere shells of houses built of bamboo and paper, and to the cultivation of that warm land staple, rice. They lacked the pioneering spirit and the rigors of a harsh climate were repugnant to them.

Developed by Americans.

While congestion became more and more marked in the southern islands, huge Yezo remained practically unused until half a century ago when the Japanese government began a paternalistic development. Though this was abandoned in favor of private initiative a few years later, the marks left by the American engineers and agricultural experts engaged at the time stand out plainly in the island. Railroads were built, buildings got under way, and model farms established. The most striking mark of the Americans was on the architecture.

Southern Japanese traditions of flimsy construction were abandoned, and houses built of heavy frame construction—a sort of New England style with Japanese adaptations. The country was heavily wooded, and as in all pioneer communities log houses also were constructed. Yezo became a New Japan and the climate is said to have reacted on the immigrants to produce "new Japanese," more energetic and resourceful than their southern brothers, true frontiersmen.

Three Large Cities.

After the settlement of Yezo was stimulated, logging and lumber production became one of the leading industries. Agriculture lagged, largely because it was believed that nowhere on the island could rice be grown. It was found later that certain varieties of rice would yield grain in parts of Yezo, though less abundantly than in the South. The demonstration of this fact made settlers somewhat less reluctant, but even now the population is only about 2,000,000, very low compared with old Japan.

In Hakodate and Otaru, principal ports, and Sapporo, inland capital, Yezo has cities of more than 100,000 population. In these and a number of other important towns the atmosphere of Japan is dominant. In some rural communities of the island, however, are considerable groups of Ainus. The Japanese have been indefatigable in their efforts to hand on to these distant cousins of the European some of the modernism that has come to the islands from the West, but their success has been slight. Only some 20,000 of these people—masters of all the islands before the Japanese came from the mainland—remain, and their numbers are decreasing.

Saghalien, still further north than Yezo has had a somewhat similar history. It, too, was a fishing station in summer, deserted in winter, and to a degree this situation still holds.

The island of Saghalien was a political perplexity both to Russia and Japan for many years. Soon after the Pilgrim Fathers landed on the east coast of America, a Japanese feudal baron dispatched an agent to this far northern island. Within twenty years after that the Russians had landed on Saghalien. Until the Russian revolution the majority of the permanent inhabitants of Saghalien were Russian.

By a treaty of 1875 the sea-going Japanese gave up all right in Saghalien to the Russians in return for full rights in the Kurile islands. This condition of affairs continued until, at the end of the Russo-Japanese war, the treaty of Portsmouth gave southern Saghalien, up to the fiftieth parallel to Japan.

Japanese Saghalien has little agricultural land, but has large forests of both deciduous and evergreen trees, amounting to more than 8,000,000 acres. Japanese paper mills are situated in Otomari and elsewhere, and an effort is being made to develop the papermaking industry.

Saghalien's Fish Industry.

But it is on fishing that the majority of the Japanese inhabitants depend for a living. As soon as the summer season is over the fishermen migrate to the southern islands of Japan for the winter. Mauka, on the west coast of Saghalien, is the center of the crab fisheries and much of the crab flake consumed in the Far East comes from this little town. A post road connects Mauka with Toyohara which is the capital of Karafuto, the name which the Japanese have given to the southern part of Saghalien.

The average annual temperature of Saghalien is near the freezing point, and if the Japanese are ever to colonize the island they will have to change their methods of dressing and building.

In summer, the streets of Saghalien's capital swarm with Japanese, the Shinto shrine on the heights overlooking the Toyohara plain is visited by thousands, and numerous fishing boats ply back and forth from the ports massing the catch which is valued at about $8,000,000 a year. But in winter, the scene is different. Then the Japanese section of the city, with its light frame houses with movable partitions, is almost deserted, and only an occasional Japanese woman in a padded kimono but with bare ankles, can be seen in the snowy streets.

The Kurile Island group is unpleasant on the whole, for mariners either of the water or the air. There are many half-sunken rocks off shore, while treacherous currents flow between the islands with each flood and ebb tide. Fogs are frequent and gales may blow at any season.

The southernmost Kurile island, Kunashiri, is just off the coast of Yezo and is more nearly a part of Japan proper than the other islands of the chain. Gradually the development that came to Yezo crept to the adjoining Kuriles. But it can hardly creep far, for the more northern of the islets are incapable of producing crops of any value and will probably never advance beyond the fishing station stage.

ELL KNOWN ELLENVILLE BUTCHER SERIOUSLY HURT

Sam Jacobowitz, a well known Ellenville butcher, sustained a fractured skull Sunday evening near Aurenkill when a calf in the rear of his motor truck jumped out of the truck, and Mr Jacobowitz leaped after it. In doing so he was thrown to the ground, striking on the back of his head, the force of the blow rendering him unconscious. He was removed to the Veterans' Memorial Hospital in Ellenville. Dr. Clark O'Meara of Kingston was called to the hospital and performed an operation. Mr Jacobowitz's condition is critical and he has been unconscious practically ever since the accident.

Fire Near Highland.

The roadside market operated by John F. Smith on the Milton road near Highland, was badly damaged by fire about nine o'clock Wednesday night. The Highland fire company answered the alarm and extinguished the flames, saving the building from complete loss. A show case was damaged, and walls and woodwork scorched, and some stock ruined in the fire, it was stated. The fire started, Mr. Smith said, from an oil stove which had been burning in the store.

Tagging Bases In Sixth Game

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Oct. 10.—Rice was the Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde of the series. At the Polo Grounds Wednesday he couldn't have been worse if he had a club foot. In the sixth game yesterday, he was the perfect outfielder.

Muddy Ruel is still the hitless wonder of the series. Some time this young man is going to step up in a pinch and bust one to uninhabited spots. That may happen in the season of 1925. Then again, it may happen today.

Some of the dissenters took issue with McNeeley on his steal of second in the fifth. The fact of the matter is, that youth was sent down by Harris, who signalled for the hit and run play. Furthermore, he got away with a clean steal, which should silence all debate.

Frisch seemed to loaf turning first on each of his doubles in the early innings, but he beat Rice's throw on each occasion.

Some one may have a clear idea as to why Harris always hits the first ball pitched when the opposing pitcher is wavering but thus far that perspicacious gentleman has not been found. Nehf opened the game by passing McNeeley on four pitched balls; whereupon Harris smacked the first one for a force out at second. Then just to multiply his sins, he was caught off first base a moment later.

Regardless of his winning single yesterday and his dazzling fielding in New York Tuesday, Harris must finish second to Frisch as a ball player in this particular series.

Goslin stepped out of the box in the last innings but Klem motioned Nehf to throw the ball regardless. It missed the plate and the umpire was forced to call a ball. Whereupon Harris gave vent to a distended argument, the object of which was not clear. He had everything he wanted as it was.

Somehow these ball clubs contrived to finish a game without a home run or without a ninth inning rally. That made the proceedings almost unofficial.

No one would have given a buffalo nickel for the Senators chances in the fourth. But they won the game in the fifth. They are one of two game ball clubs. The other is the New York Giants.

Taylor, the Senators substitute third baseman entered the game in the ninth in spite of the fact he had and has a compound fracture of one of the bones of his throwing hand. He didn't get a chance to handle the ball, which may or may not have been just as well.

Food Costs More In Twenty Cities

Retail Cost of Food Increased in September in Only 20 Cities—Highest Increase, 3 Per Cent.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Oct. 10.—With the advent of fall the retail cost of food took another jump in twenty cities during September, the highest increase, amounting to 3 per cent, being reported by Bridgeport, Conn., Fall River, Mobile and New Haven, the department of labor announced today.

An increase of two per cent was reported by Boston, Los Angeles, Louisville, Manchester, Newark, New York, Norfolk, Philadelphia, Providence and Richmond, while Charleston, S. C., Jacksonville, Fla., Milwaukee, Wis., Minneapolis, Omaha and Savannah reported an increase of one per cent.

Robbers Turn In Fire Alarm

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Oct. 10.—Four robbers, who turned in a fire alram two blocks away to divert the attention of police, succeeded today in stealing furs valued at $50,000 from the Hudson Bay Fur Company salesrooms in Brooklyn.

The theft was effected after the night watchman had been disposed of in a way as yet undetermined by police. They believe he was kidnapped.

It was before dawn when the alarm was sounded. Police and firemen answering it found no fire. Then they heard the crash of the plate glass window in the fur salesroom and, running there, arrived in time to see the four men escaping in a motor car.

Defensive Air Force Test

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Oct. 10—Nine Martin bomber airplanes will hop off from Langeley Field, Va., tonight to attempt the cross country flight in formation at night. The planes will make the flight as a test of the feasibility of sending a defensive air force from an aerial base to New York to protect that city and port in case of attack by enemy forces in the air or on the seas. One of the planes will carry radio and will broadcast the progress and purposes of the flight enroute.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of my beloved friend, Earl C. Rightmyer who departed this life October 10, 1918.

Surrounded by friends I am lonesome,
In the midst of my pleasure I am blue;
A smile on my face still a heart aches,
Aching and longing for you.
It seems that nothing could part us,
That death with its strength would not do;
There's nothing left now but the heartache,

Financial and Commercial

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Oct. 10.—Trading in the stock market today was more restricted than in any previous session this week. Many active stocks did not appear on the tape in the first two hours and the total volume of business up to the noon period was only 220,000 shares.

The monthly unfilled tonnage report of the Steel Corporation, showing a gain of 184,000 tons in unfilled orders, was in line with expectations and caused no very impressive demonstration. The demand for copper stocks continued and gains of a point or more were recorded in most issues but United States Smelting declined under profit taking. Independent steel shares were also in good demand, with Gulf States Steel the leader.

Selling pressure increased as the day advanced and the market exhibited a very irregular tone from the fourth hour.

American Can made a sharp advance to 133 in the early trading, but it encountered heavy selling at that point, and declined to around 132. General Electric dropped about 4 points, and Cast Iron Pipe four, while American Water Works, after a rise of five points, declined to its previous selling price.

United States Steel and American Can broke sharply in the fourth hour under bearish selling. Steel Common at 107 was down nearly 2 points from the high of the day and American Can at 131 showed a loss of 2¼ points. Selling spread to the whole market and a reaction was in order.

Bankers Agree on $200,000,000 Loan

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Oct. 10.—An agreement for a $200,000,000 loan for Germany under the Dawes reparations plan was signed by the international bankers here today.

The ceremony took place at the Bank of England.

The agreement calls for the flotation of the loan on condition the terms are approved by the inter-allied reparation commission at Paris. Such approval is expected at once.

Fowler Gets $300 Verdict for Auto

An action brought by Eugene H. Fowler, against Nathan M. Hess, for damages to the Fowler automobile, which was struck by the Hess car on the Woodstock road on July 4, 1923, was taken up for trial before Judge Hasbrouck and a jury in the supreme court today for trial. There was no appearance on the part of defendant. Floyd W. Powell and Judge James Jenkins appeared for plaintiff.

Mrs. Fowler testified that on the day in question about noon, while the car of her husband was coming toward Kingston, a car driven by Hess skidded on the road and struck their machine, throwing it against the bank and wrecking it so badly that it was not considered best to have it repaired. In the car were Mr. and Mrs. Fowler and their daughter, and Mrs. Fowler's father, who was seriously injured.

The Fowler car, a 1913 Cadillac, was valued at from $600 to $700 before the accident by Fred Vandemark, mechanic, who saw the car. He said that after the accident it was not worth anything and was never repaired. The car had been purchased for $300.

The jury brought in a verdict for Mr. Fowler for $300.

All jurors were excused until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

Hogs Followed Owner

Hogs usually are neither intelligent nor companionable, but like other animals they do not always run true to type. In moving from one farm to another, perhaps ten miles away, Mr. Turner, a farmer of the Kentucky hills, decided, writes a contributor to the Youth's Companion, to leave his herd of forty swine in an open field at his old home until the following morning when he would return for them. Next morning he was up early in his new house, making preparations for the arduous task of driving before him over rough mountain roads two score hogs, any or all of which might prove refractory. But when he emerged from the house into the front yard imagine his astonishment at seeing his hogs, all forty of them, standing before him at the gate!

Were the hogs so much attached to their owner that they followed him to his new home? Or did they follow the trail of the farmer's cattle? The owner and all the neighbors, too, were completely mystified.

Famous Old Highland Town

Crieff was greatly beloved by Charles Reade, who said: "The habitable globe possesses no more delightful spot than Crieff."

But the district is not only charming; it is also of hoary antiquity. Stone and bronze instruments, records of a bygone age, have been found there. Muthill, three miles from Crieff, is the site where the Roman legions under Agricola defeated the British leader, Galgacus, and thirty thousand men. The earls palatine of Strathearn, "leaders of the Celtic party in Scotland—tribal kings in their own right," held courts at Crieff from the earliest time of which we have any record, but modern Crieff may be said to date its rise from the opening of the first railway in 1856.—London Post.

Climbing a Tall Smokestack

When a huge steel smokestack of a power house needed painting and it was found rather difficult to arrange a tackle to haul up a man, the fireman made a parachute that fitted snugly inside of the stack. He attached a string to the parachute and allowed the draft in the stack to carry it up. A small rope was next tied to the string and pulled up, and finally a rope strong enough to hold the tackle, which was arranged to hoist up the painter.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

"To Walk Spanish"

To make a person "walk Spanish" is to make him come up to time, or to make him act under compulsion. It refers to the old sport among boys in which one boy seizes another by the collar and the seat of the trousers and forces him along on tiptoe. Hence, by extension, it means to walk gingerly. Apparently the expression originally referred to the manner in which the Spanish pirates used to handle their prisoners while starting them out on the plank.—Exchange.

Three Feeds Now Cause Soft Pork

Problem Becoming Nation-Wide Because of Increasing Use of Soy Bean.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The feeding of hogs so as to prevent the development of soft characteristics, once thought to be a problem only in those regions where peanuts are fed, is no longer a sectional difficulty, says the United States Department of Agriculture in calling attention to the results which have been obtained during five years of investigation. It is now almost a nation-wide problem among hog raisers because of the increasing use of soy beans which also produced carcasses lacking in firmness. There are now three feeds recognized as producers of soft pork, peanuts, soy beans, and rice polish.

Result of Experiments.

At the recent annual meeting at Knoxville, Tenn., representatives of the state experiment stations taking part in these investigations, and representatives of the United States Department of Agriculture, discussed the results obtained in this long series of experiments. This is the first year it has been possible to make definite statements on the influence of soy beans on firmness of hogs. Summaries of the experimental results obtained by the Alabama, Georgia, Indiana, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, Tennessee and Texas agricultural experiment stations in co-operation with the United States Department of Agriculture during five years' investigation of the soft-pork problem have shown that:

1. Soy beans grazed or self-fed alone or with minerals self-fed through a period of seven to eight weeks to pigs starting at approximately 100 pounds weight and making gains of 40 to 50 pounds produce soft carcasses. Further, the results have shown that the degree of softness of the carcass increases as the gain in weight of a hog on this feed increases.

2. Soy beans grazed or self-fed alone or with minerals self-fed to pigs starting at approximately 100 pounds weight and making at least a moderate rate of gain through a period of seven to eight weeks will not produce firm carcasses even though a subsequent gain in weight has been made by the pigs on corn and tankage equal to that previously made on the soy beans.

3. Soy beans grazed or self-fed with a supplementary ration of 2½ per cent of shelled corn with or without minerals self-fed produce soft hogs when the pigs are started on the feeds at approximately 100 pounds weight and make at least a moderate rate of gain through a feeding period of seven to eight weeks.

4. Rice polish and tankage self-fed, free choice on oat or rye pasture or in dry lot and with or without a small supplement of skim milk hand-fed to pigs starting at 35 to 125 pounds weight and making gains of 80 pounds or more through a feeding period of eight to fifteen weeks, produce soft carcasses.

5. There is a direct relation between immaturity and softness in pigs. When pigs are fed on ordinary feed combinations which are not unusually low in fat content, such as corn and tankage, or corn, middlings and tankage on pasture or in dry lot and slaughtered at a weight of approximately 100 pounds or less they are, in the usual case, soft.

Feeding Corn and Tankage.

6. Hogs fed corn and tankage gradually become firmer as they mature or take on weight and finish. While hogs fed in this way are usually soft at 100 pounds or less, the hardening is progressive, so that when slaughtered at approximately 175 pounds or more they are, in the usual case, hard.

7. Brewer's rice and tankage self-fed, free choice on oat pasture with or without a small supplement of skim milk hand-fed to pigs starting at approximately 60 pounds weight and making gains of 150 to 200 pounds through feeding periods of 12 to 15 weeks produce, in the usual case, extremely hard hogs, in fact, of a degree of firmness distinctly greater than that occurring in corn fed hogs.

8. The mixture of cornmeal 5 parts and peanut meal (hull free) 1 part self-fed with or without supplementary minerals to pigs starting at approximately 80 pounds weight and making gains of approximately 100 pounds through a feeding period of 9 to 10 weeks produce, in the usual case, hard or medium-hard hogs.

9. Results have shown that when the softening feeds and feed combinations—peanuts or soy beans alone, soy beans supplemented with a 2½ per cent ration of shelled corn, or rice polish and tankage (each with or without minerals)—are fed to pigs which have previously received no softening feeds, there is a distinct relation between the degree of softness and the starting weight and the degree of softness which develops in the pigs decreases as the starting weight increases, provided equal gains in weight are made and other factors are uniform. Whether the lighter pig of the higher degree of softness or the heavier pig of the relatively lower degree of softness will be hardened more readily by subsequent feeding of hardening feeds is still undetermined. Experiments to settle this question are now in progress.

100 Hour Run Ends Saturday

At the end of the 72nd hour of the 100-hour run being made by a stock Chevrolet touring car, the car had made a little better than one hour's running time per gallon of gasoline. At that time the car had consumed 71 gallons of gasoline and 3 quarts of oil. At the end of the 48 hours one quart of water had been added to the radiator.

Promptly at 12 o'clock noon Saturday the run will be completed at the show rooms of Sutliff, Inc. The speedometer will not be uncovered until 8 o'clock in the evening when the cover will be removed by the official observer of the Automobile Club of Ulster county, who is checking the run. All guesses in the guessing contest as to how many miles the car will run in 100 hours must be in at that time.

At 8 o'clock each morning and evening and at 2 o'clock each afternoon and at night drivers are changed on the car and gasoline and oil measured and checked by the official observer. A number of people who have witnessed the speed with which these tasks are completed are amazed. The entire job of changing drivers, adding water, oil and gasoline and the re-sealing of the tanks by the observer is frequently done in four minutes, and one change was made in less time. The manner of taking care of the car when it arrives at the garage for its change of drivers and filling with oil and gasoline is an interesting sight.

At the completion of the run at noon tomorrow the car will be placed on the show room floor in the same condition which it completes the run. It will be on exhibition there for a time and at 8 o'clock the seals will be removed and the total number of miles be made known. Up until that time no one, not even the drivers, will know how far they have traveled.

Saugerties Corporation Formed.

A certificate of incorporation of the Saugerties United Theater, Inc., has been granted by the Secretary of State and filed in the Ulster county clerk's office. The purpose for which the corporation has been formed is to furnish amusements, entertainments and diversion to the public either indoors or outdoors, in theatres, etc., The capital stock is to be $25,000 and the principal office of business Saugerties. The directors are Philip J. Barnes and Frank E. Nemeo of Newark, N. J., and Wallace E. J. Collins of Brooklyn.

Society Notes

Society of Little Gardens.

The Society of Little Gardens met with Mrs. Eloise Myers at her home, 666 Broadway on Wednesday afternoon, October 7. The dahlia was the topic for the day and a most interesting afternoon was spent in a discussion of the culture of this favorite flower.

Birthday Surprise Party.

Miss Gertrude Dermody was agreeably surprised Tuesday evening at her home on Jansen avenue by a number of friends who gathered to assist her in celebrating her birthday. During the evening games and music were enjoyed, and at a late hour dainty refreshments were served Miss Dermody received the congratulations of her friends and the wish that she would enjoy many more such happy occasions.

Wood-Dunn.

Virgil Wood, son of Mrs. Ella Wood of Accord, and Evelyn Dunn, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Truman L. Dunn of Kerhonkson, were quietly married at the Ellenville M. E. parsonage, October 5, at 3 o'clock, by the Rev. Charles A. Dann. The bride charmingly dressed in a gown of white Spanish lace over blue crepe de chine, was attended by her sister, Mrs. Clifford T. Lyons. Clifford T. Lyons acted as best man. A bountiful supper was served at the bride's home to the immediate families. On Monday the young couple left by auto for a honeymoon through the eastern counties. Mr. and Mrs. Wood will make their home with the bride's parents at present. Their many friends wish them a long and happy wedded life.

HIGH HOG PRICES.

Pittsburgh Market Quotes Highest Heavy Hog Prices Since 1921.

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Pittsburgh, Oct. 10.—The heavy hog prices quoted today were $12.to $12.05, the highest here since 1921. This is largely due to the high price of corn and a dearth of heavy hogs in the market.

Negligence Case Settled.

An action brought by Edward Miller against George S. DuBois, which was placed on the day calendar in the Supreme court, was announced as settled when the case was called this morning. The case was a negligence action, N. H. Fessenden appeared for plaintiff and DuBois J. Gillette for defendant.

Improvements to Millinery.

Many improvements are being made to the millinery shop of H. R. Leeder at 658 Broadway. A new show window has been installed and many interior improvements are to be made.

Daytona Suffers From Cloudburst

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Daytona, Fla., Oct. 10.—With the entire city already under several inches of water, a veritable cloudburst continued to inundate Daytona and lowlands near here today, causing damage running into thousands of dollars and endangering many lives. During the past 14 hours 12 inches of rain fall was recorded, causing what is said to be the worst flood since 1901.

LOCAL DEATH RECORD.

Recent Deaths and Funerals of Persons in This Vicinity.

Alice Golden, wife of the late Edward Reilly, died Thursday morning, at her home, 1,241 Clinton avenue, New York city, following a week's illness. News of her death will be received in this city with much sorrow by her many friends. She is survived by one brother, Martin W. Golden, of this city, two nephews and one niece, William Golden of New York city and William A. and Anna Golden of this city. Funeral from the late residence on Saturday morning, thence to St. Augustine's Church, with a requiem Mass for the repose of her soul. Interment in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery, this city, upon the arrival of the 2:15 West Shore train Saturday afternoon.

The funeral of John Maurer was held from his late home at South Rondout Thursday morning at 9 o'clock and 10 o'clock at St. Peter's Church, where a requiem Mass was offered for the repose of his soul by the Rev. Joseph Ostermann. The services were very largely attended, the church being filled by his many relatives and friends, who came to pay their respects to his memory. The employes of the Dwyer Brothers' shipyard attended the services in a body, also a delegation from the Hasbrouck Engine Company. The bearers were: Michael and Henry Kelsch, William Gehringer, Nicholas Schnur, Wendell Scherer and Charles Snyder, representing the St. Peter's' Sick and Aid Society, the Holy Name Society and the Hasbrouck Engine Co. The floral tributes were very profuse and beautiful, testifying to the high esteem in which he was held by all who knew him. The Rev. Ostermann accompanied the remains to the family plot in St. Peter's' Cemetery, where the committal services and interment took place.

TWO ARMY FLIERS INJURED IN PRACTICE

Over the Rockies At Express Speed

Navy Dirigible Shenandoah on Epic Trip Drives Through Air at 80 Miles an Hour, More Than a Mile Above Sea Level.

Editor's Note.—An epic step in aerial navigation is chronicled in the description of the progress of the navy dirigible Shenandoah during the night hours as she thrust her silver nose into the higher altitudes over the Rocky Mountains and drove at express train speed westward toward San Diego. The Shenandoah is a pioneer in her 9,000 mile trip to the Pacific coast and return.

Aboard the Shenandoah, Oct. 10, via Fort Bliss, Texas, by wireless to International News Service.—Few voyages in history have furnished more thrills in as short a time as the navigation of the first passes of the Rocky Mountains by the navy dirigible Shenandoah last night.

Driving ahead at a speed of 74 miles an hour with a wind which roared through the airship's tunnel like cannon—rising gradually between the highest peaks, it was at an altitude of 6,800 feet—following a new and uncharted course with only a winding white ribbon of highway and glistening black railway as uncertain guides—skimming the ground so closely that frequently jagged mountains almost walled in this leviathan of the skies, the Shenandoah sailed through the mountains, twisting, turning, rising, falling, like an immense bird, until the tortuous Rio Grande glistened ahead and her nose turned towards the lights of El Paso.

The Shenandoah crossed the Pecos river and left the Texas plains behind at 7:50 p. m. She was in the foot hills of the Rockies and in a few minutes mounted from an altitude of 2,500 feet to 6,200.

Cool air of the mountain top chilled the expanding gas and served in a measure to counteract the effect of the rarified atmosphere. More speed was added to stop the expansion.

The half ton of water ballast was dropped. The motors were driving her through the air with 1,500 horsepower and the winds were straining at the airship, which seemed equal to any ocean liner, so faithfully did she respond to her rudders.

Some times quivering, but always swiftly and surely forward she drove, with the roar of the winds on taut ear drums the only proof of the hurricane over the mountain tops. Sierra Blanca was passed at 10:15 p. m. The Shenandoah had an altitude of 6,400 feet and her trailing shadow below was registering sixty miles an hour over the ground. She obeyed her rudders and rose higher and higher over the white earth until she soared over the next ridge away from the railroads which disappeared through the tunnel. Fort Hancock, on the Rio Grande, was reached at 10:45 p. m., and the most of the mountain passes had been negotiated.

On the right were the lights of El Paso, 40 miles away, and the Shenandoah swung up the north bank of the Rio Grande, avoiding a loop of the winding river which might encircle Mexican territory, until the roar of whistles, the flash of waiting automobile lights and a big search light throwing her length into relief against the sky evidenced El Paso's welcome. Texas had been crossed in 14 hours of sailing.

Commander Zachary Lansdowne, who navigated the Shenandoah through the mountains, expects to anchor her in San Diego before dark, ending the second length of the 9,000 mile cruise. Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of navy aeronautics, was on the bridge during the exciting moments and declared the difficulties of navigation with complications of bouyancy and uncharted land were greater than those of piloting a war ship at sea.

The Shenandoah is scheduled to leave San Diego at 10 a. m., Saturday on the voyage up the Pacific coast to Lake View, near Tacoma, completing the outward-bound half of the cruise.

K. H. S. to Play Union College

The following K. H. S. football players will travel to Schenectady Saturday, where they will face the strong Union College fresh team: Goldberg, Flanagan, Herzog, Tetley, Miller, O'Reilly, Mullenhauer, Simonetty, Davis, Shultz, Kelleher, Pennington, Rosensweig, Cranston and Watts. Coaches, Dumm, Benson and O'Leary will accompany the team.

The Union College team played the N. Y. M. A. team last Saturday, in which game the eleven were unable to score. The N. Y. M. A. team is composed of men like Ed. Messinger, who is playing regular tackle now. However the Union bunch held them to a scoreless tie. The students are planning a cheering section for the game, and expect to bring home the bacon.

Washington Wild Over Final Game

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Oct. 10.—The baseball frenzy that has gripped the national capital for weeks and in the last ten days has almost stopped the wheels of government, reached its climax last night and early today when thousands of fans engaged in an all night scramble for tickets for the seventh game of the world series.

Nothing like it ever was seen in Washington, and it is doubtful if anything approaching it was ever seen in any city. At 1 o'clock this morning there were lines that wound for blocks around the ball park and therein were representatives of every walk of life in the capital.

The unprecedented confusion in the ticket situation was caused by the fact that no tickets had been printed or sold for a seventh game in Washington. The club management rushed the printers and then undertook to dispose of the last game tickets on the basis of the first three games, ie, holders of stubs were to be given preference and the same seats so far as possible.

Melon Will Be Popular

A new type of melon called the Texas honey ball, which is a cross between the Texas cannonball cantaloupe and the California honeydew melon, will be found in the markets this year. The melon is almost perfectly round in shape, and averages five inches in diameter. About 2,500 acres of the melons have been planted. Under favorable conditions, 1,250 carloads should be produced. The meat of the new honeyball melon is similar in texture to that of the honeydew, one and one-half inches thick, and is covered by a smooth, thin rind, fairly well netted. The chief merits of the melon are its shipping qualities and its flavor. Shipments can be made without refrigeration to any part of the United States that can be reached within two weeks. The melon is not susceptible to damage from bruises caused by ordinary handling.

Great Sermon

Jack and Jim, two small boys, had been bribed by a fond grandmother with a promise of two helpings of mince pie and any other delicacies they might wish if they would go to church with her.

After the services Jack was introduced to the minister and said politely: "Mr. Longwind, I sure am thankful to you for that sermon."

"And how is that, my boy?" asked the gratified pastor, while grandma beamed.

"Well, you see, Jim bet me your sermon wouldn't last more'n three-quarters of an hour, an' you let it last forty-eight minutes. So I won his knife and I'm awful grateful to you."

American Industries

In the United States there are 300,000 manufacturing plants, which supply the needs and comfort of the people of this country and other parts of the world. They use $400,000,000 worth of materials yearly.

Connections All Fans Should Know

How Ammeters and Voltmeters Must Be Attached in Circuit.

At one time or another radio fans wish to have either a voltmeter, an ammeter or both. These instruments are either to be placed on the panel of a set and are to be permanently connected to the receiver or are to be used as external trouble shooters. In either case it is well for the prospective purchaser of these instruments to know just how they should be used and how to connect them in a circuit.

First, the ammeter. The connecting of an ammeter in a circuit is always the same, no matter whether the amount of current to be measured is one-millionth of an ampere or one million amperes. The ammeter is always connected in series with the source of current before it gets to the load. The diagram accompanying this story shows how to use the instruments on a six-volt battery for use in a radio set.

Every ammeter has two terminals. These two are marked as to polarity. That is, one of them is marked with either a plus sign or stamped "Positive." This terminal is connected to the positive battery lead, and the other terminal is connected to the circuit. Thus in Fig. c it will be seen that the ammeter is in series with the positive "A" battery lead.

Use of the Voltmeter.

The voltmeter is used to determine the voltage, or potential difference, in a battery, in a circuit or in part of a circuit. It is always connected across the circuit, whether the voltage under measurement be large or small. This is shown in Fig. b.

How to Use the Instruments on Six-Volt Battery.

The voltmeter also has two terminals that are marked positive and negative. The positive is marked by a plus sign or the word "Positive." The negative terminal is easily found by looking for the terminal marked positive—the other is naturally the negative—or by designating the post as negative that has no identifying marks upon it.

In connecting a voltmeter in a circuit containing many tubes it must first be decided whether the voltage of the entire circuit is to be measured or just the voltage across one filament. If just the voltage impressed upon one tube is to be measured, then connect the voltmeter as per Fig. c. But for the entire circuit connect the voltmeter to the "A" battery posts.

The circuit given in Fig. c for the ammeter is for measuring one tube's amperage only. For use on all tubes the ammeter should be connected in series with the positive "A" battery binding post and the rest of the circuit. That is, the "A" battery positive lead goes first to the ammeter and then to the filaments of the tubes.

Scale Reading for Ammeter.

The scale reading for an ammeter will depend upon the amount of current flowing in a circuit. For testing the drain of a set employing one UV-102A tube the scale reading can be as low as one-half an ampere. The same for WD 11 or 12. For a 199 tube no ammeter is necessary. To find the correct scale reading necessary multiply the number of tubes to be used by the filament rating (amperes) given to the tubes by the manufacturer, and then get an ammeter with a scale reading a little higher than the product obtained from the above multiplication.

The choice of the voltmeter for scale reading will depend upon the filament voltage of the tubes used. For UV-201A tubes a ten-volt meter is correct, for WD 11 or 12 tubes two-volt scale reading and for UV-199 tubes four or five volt scale reading. This does not vary, no matter how many tubes are to be used in the circuit.

Push-Pull Switch Will Be Great Convenience

The use of a small push-or-pull switch, located on the face of the receiving-set panel, will prove a great convenience in turning the set on and off.

This switch should be inserted in series with the negative "A" battery lead.

By pulling it out, the set will be put into operation by allowing the "A" battery current to flow through the tube filaments. By pushing it in, the set is turned off by cutting off the "A" battery from the filaments.

This will save the trouble of turning down each of the rheostats each time the set is put out of use.

This is especially true in the case of the multi-tube set.

It will also eliminate the chance of not turning off the rheostats far enough, with the resultant useless drain on the "A" battery. The rheostats can be left in the correct position and the set turned off and on by the switch. There are a number of reliable makes on the market.

English Idea of Murder

The generally accepted definition of murder in English law is that of Coke: When a person of sound memory and discretion unlawfully killeth any reasonable creature in being and under the king's peace with malice aforethought, either expressed or implied.

Abyssinian Alphabet Huge

Abyssinia is a nation of more than 10,000,000 of whom a large percentage are illiterate, and it is a coincidence that the Abyssinian alphabet contains 236 letters. If an Abyssinian typewriter should be built on the same plan as the one used in America and European countries, it would have nearly 500 keys. Without any extra characters it would ordinarily have 472 keys, providing 944 letters, numerals and necessary characters.

The "Good Old Times"

When one hates to carry even a bunch of keys, let him recall the time when a long-barreled pistol was part of nearly every man's impediments, besides a dirk.

Being One's Own Boss

"De man dat succeeds in bein' his own boss," said Uncle Eben, "is liable to find he's picked hisself out de hardest kind of a taskmaster."—Washington Star.

MISSIONARY TO SPEAK IN BAPTIST CHURCHES

The Rev. M. C. Parish, of Burma, will speak in the Baptist churches of the city on Sunday. He will be at the Albany Avenue Baptist Church at the morning service, and at the Wurts Street Baptist Church in the evening.

For seventeen years he has been a Baptist missionary at Pegu, Burma, about fifty miles from Rangoon. There he has been in charge of a field ninety miles from north to south and fifty miles from east to west. He has served many races for he has conducted evangelistic and educational work among Burmans, Taungthus, Chins, Chinese, Indians, Mohammedans and others. When he started work in Pegu there was only one church with about thirty members. When he left Burma for furlough there were six organized churches with about 250 members and enough Christians in two other villages to organize churches. He also developed the school from a vernacular primary day school to two Anglo-vernacular middle boarding schools.

Mr. Parish has always done a great deal of touring in the jungle. Last year, besides his regular travel on bicycle, train, ox-cart, river launch and on foot, he and Dr. W. F. Thomas, the mission evangelist, held two evangelistic campaigns and attended four associations on the Pegu field. Mr. Parish's sister, Miss Mary Parish, is at present in charge of the work at Pegu.

A. H. VAN BUREN ADDRESSES HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

Thursday afternoon shortly after lunch, a special assembly was called at the High School by Principal Van Ingen. The members of the Kiwanis Club of Kingston were the guests and before the assembly they enjoyed a hearty meal prepared by the home economics classes of the high school.

The meeting was opened by two selections by the high school's orchestra. The entire body then sang "America the Beautiful," after which Augustus H. Van Buren spoke on "The Constitution of the United States." The speech was greatly applauded. The high school cheer leaders then led a cheer for the Kiwanians.

MILLIONAIRE'S DAUGHTER PREFERS WORK

MISS HELEN BEROLZHEIMER.

Miss Helen Berolzheimer, twenty-year-old daughter of the multimillionaire City Chamberlain of New York City, accustomed as she is to wealth and luxury, has decided that work is the thing, after all, and she has begun as secretary of the Mayor's Committee of Reception to Distinguished Guests in New York City, at $25 a week. She wears "sensible gowns" to work, and refuses to permit her social duties to interfere with her work.

Missionary Union Annual Session

Third Annual Conference of Woman's Missionary Union of the Classis of Ulster Held at Fair Street Reformed Church—Interesting Reports of Missionary Work.

(Official Report.)

The third annual conference of Woman's Missionary Union of the Classis of Ulster was held in the Fair Street Reformed Church on Thursday, October 9, the opening session convening at 10 o'clock.

The convention was called to order by the president, Mrs. M. A. Weed, of Kingston, who appointed resolution, place and courtesy committees, then asked all to rise and sing a stirring opening hymn. The Rev. Lucas Boeve of the First Dutch Church, read selections of Scripture and offered prayer.

Mrs. Arthur Church very graciously welcomed the conference and speakers to the hospitality of the entertaining church, and Mrs. M. F. Luther of Port Ewen responded fittingly.

After the reports of the secretary and treasurer, Mrs. M. B. Norris, was presented and brought greetings from the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions. She spoke of the Golden Jubilee of the board to be celebrated in 1925 for which all the auxiliaries are working and the prayer circle for the objectives of the jubilee reaches around the world. Thirteen women met at the Marble Collegiate Church in New York city in 1875 and organized the board, in order to aid the four schools then in existence in the foreign fields, namely, Amoy, Chittoor, Vollore and Yokahama. At that time it took the missionaries four months to reach India or China. Mrs. Norris asked especially for prayers for China at this time, that her government may become more settled and that there may be opportunity to develop their really sterling qualities. The mission study books are on China this year.

In the mission field there are 20,000,000 people and only 60 missionaries, one to 175,000 souls, so is there any wonder that the jubilee cry is more missionaries? Ten new ones are already promised, and prayers are asked that some of those to come may be doctors, who are sorely needed.

After the singing of a hymn, the president introduced the Rev. Glichi Kamamata, who is in charge of the Japanese Y. M. C. A. in New York city. He has been in this position only seven months, and among English speaking people two years, but gave a splendid report of his work in very choice English, speaking very slowly and carefully. The Harlem Church at 123rd street allows the use of their building and gymnasium for this work among the Japanese in New York, but when the work was begun, they had no equipment but courage and moral support. With the help of the Woman's Board of Domestic Missions and their own efforts, they have dormitories, now, which pay their monthly expenses of about $600. Mr. Kamamata says that saving one soul in New York means saving fifty in Japan, as a native returning to his own country as an eyewitness to Christianity can so much better present it to his own people.

The conference then adjourned and a bountiful luncheon for the officers and speakers was served by the entertaining auxiliary, with coffee and fruit for those bringing basket lunches.

Mrs. Weed called the convention to order at 1:15 and Mrs. Ellsworth read the draft of a proposed constitution for the Missionary Union suggested by the Classical committee. One of the articles suggested that all business be transacted at the spring conference, giving the time at the fall meeting for the speakers from the boards. This constitution was adopted.

Prayers for our missionaries and their work were offered by the Rev. W. F. Stowe of Kingston, and the Rev. Leonard Braam of Accord.

The Nominating Committee presented their report, which was accepted, and the secretary cast a ballot for the following officers to serve until the regular election at the spring meeting: President, Mrs. Marcus A. Weed, Kingston; first vice-president, Mrs. Arthur Church, Kingston; second vice-president, Mrs. A. D. Van Buren, Kingston; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Edgar Ellsworth, St. Remy; recording secretary, Mrs. A. H. DeForest, Kingston; treasurer, Mrs. W. S. Eltinge, Kingston; press reporter, Mrs. H. B. Walker, Kingston.

Mrs. Eugene S. Booth, a teacher in Ferris Seminary in Japan, and in Japanese costume told of the wonderful work being done there, still in spite of the destruction by the earthquake, and showing how worth while it is to aid them in erecting a new building, the alumni have already given $9,000. The seminary was started with three students and now there are 639. Mrs. Booth described a day with the girls at the seminary, sketching their costumes, and showing samples of the cups, bowls, and chop sticks they use at meals. Their opening service in English, and the Doxology is learned quickly. Subjects are taught in Japanese, and English is taught just as French or German are taught in our schools. She spoke of the tragic death of Miss Kuyper during the earthquake and said that the bravery of her passing influenced girls to come and get the Christian training, which enabled her to die so bravely. Her last words were, translated, "It's all right, it is the will of God—my greetings to you all"

During the offering, a rendition of the Twenty-third Psalm was beautifully sung as a duet by Mrs. Wicks and Mrs. Lieske, with Mrs. Eltinge at the organ.

Mrs. James E. Graham, representing the Woman's Board of Domestic Missions, told striking incidents, showing the wonderful work being done in the various fields in our own country. In one of the churches in Iowa a father and mother with nine children were at both morning and afternoon services of their church each Sunday, coming some distance in their car, and another couple with ten children, coming still further, were always there in the morning and often in the afternoon. An example in church attendance for us all. There are 345,000 Indians in the country and one-half of these are in Oklahoma, where a wonderful work is being done, and as the child of today will be the man and woman of tomorrow, a special work is being done with the Indian children.

Following the address, a hymn was sung and then Miss Lang spoke for a few minutes on the urgent need of interesting young women in mission work for their own sakes as well as to take the places of the older workers, as they are obliged to give up. She asked us to take this matter to heart, to God, and in hand.

The conference was invited to meet in Hurley next fall.

The resolutions committee offered resolutions thanking all who had contributed to the helpfulness of the meeting, and expressed regret for the absence of the pastor of the entertaining church, owing to illness.

Some of the pastors present expressed their enjoyment of the conference and their appreciation of the work of the women.

Record Atlantic Flight Unlikely

Zeppelin's Commander Will Not Try to Make Speedy Voyage at Expense of Safety in Bringing Z.R.-3 to America.

(Copyright 1924 by International News Service).

By Dr. Hugo Eckener, World's Foremost Authority on Zeppelin Airships.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Oct. 10.—I strongly advise against the American people pinning an exaggerated expectations on a possible speed record by the Z.R.-3 on her trip across the Atlantic.

The Z.R.-3 will travel comfortably at cruising speed. She is too small for a record over the Atlantic and will have too little fuel on board for such a feat.

The duration of the trip probably will be between seventy and eighty hours. If unusually favorable weather permits we may make it in sixty hours.

If we do make it in sixty I shall rejoice all the more—my pipe will taste good after so many smokeless hours.

(Note—Smoking is absolutely prohibited on board all Zeppelins owing to the dangers of fire and explosion.)

However, under no circumstances will I try to make a speedy voyage at the expense of safety.

Please do not mistake me. In explanation of my words about bad weather I wish to say that stormy weather not only prolongs fights, and under certain circumstances a storm is dangerous. It must be admitted that a storm might contain certain other menacing factors for airships. But you can meet these dangers exactly as a modern Atlantic liner can meet a heavy gale at sea.

The dangers I mean do not lie in the devastating force of a horizontal storm attack, which smashes ship masts and uproots trees, but in vertical motions of which the man on the ground feels nothing at all.

Those vertical vibrations are especially prevalent in the first frontal outbreak of a whirl-storm wind-pocket. Indeed they are usually connected with whirlwinds. These also invariably contain strong electrical tensions and vibrations which require the most careful attention.

To meet these vertical storm thrusts not only is through experienced airship navigation required but also—and this is highly important—a carefully trimmed ship which is well in hand by its master.

Losses of airships owing to whirlwinds, in my opinion, are always traceable to inexperience or lack of skill. Incidentally it is an interesting fact that the stronger a whirlwind or an air pocket, the smaller its expansion. Airships are enabled to evade atmospheric disturbances of limited extent.

Therein lies the airship's superiority over slow conveyances on land and sea, which cling to a surface.

Advice for Poets

To the poet, as to every other, we say first of all, "See." If you cannot do that, it is of no use to keep stringing rhymes together, jingling sensibilities against each other, and name yourself a poet; there is no hope for you. If you can, there is, in prose or verse, in action or speculation, all manner of hope.—Carlyle in "Heroes and Hero Worship."

Sperm Whale Valuable

The most valuable catch that can be made in salt water is a sperm whale. A very large specimen taken off the west coast of Vancouver Island was found to contain 250 pounds of ambergris. This alone brought $150,000, while the blubber and spermaceti were worth another $3,500.

WINDSHIELD FOR REAR AUTO SEAT

Heavy Material for Construction Can Be Avoided by Using Celluloid.

Windshields used on rear seats of automobiles are usually constructed of thick plate glass and require a substantial metal frame to hold them in position. This heavy construction can be avoided by making the shield of celluloid and metal rod as shown in the drawing. It is easy to adjust and there will be no danger of being cut by broken glass, should an accident occur.

Framework of Brass.

The framework is made of ¼-inch brass rod, bent to the shape indicated. Iron rod can also be used provided it is painted to prevent rust. Four pieces of 1-32-inch celluloid are cut to fit inside of the frame. These are sewed or glued to strips of heavy rubberized, or leatherized fabric, which is folded over the frame and fastened by means of snaps. A good adhesive for gluing celluloid to cloth or leather is made by mixing two parts of shellac, three parts of spirits of camphor and four parts of alcohol. The fittings permanently attached to the inside of the body to hold the windshield, are made of ⅛-inch sheet brass. The frame and the shield itself are readily removable. —G. A. Luers, Washington, D. C., in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Correct Proportion of Gasoline Mixture

The correct proportion of gasoline for a perfect fuel mixture is .07 of a pound of gas to a pound of dry air.

It is possible to operate on a mixture containing as much as .12 of a pound of gas to the pound of dry air, which is nearly twice as much gasoline as is needed.

This wide range of mixture strength constitutes the greatest factor in wastage of gasoline. The majority of car owners run more nearly at the maximum strength than at the minimum, which would give them better results. They are using nearly twice as much fuel as there is any need for. Think it over.

Loud Speaking Signs With Varied Appeals

Motorists who can read English will have little excuse in being caught in evading speed laws. Towns throughout the country are very active in putting up warning signs, with the aim of better traffic regulations and of improved accident record. Here are several signs with varied appeal, as reported by one tourist:

"This is a good road. It will cost you money to burn it up."

"Slow down. Look before you weep."

"Don't covet your neighbor's side of the road."

"Look out. You may meet a fool around the corner."

"Stop—Look—and Live."

"Don't speed. It is 'Good morning, Judge.'"

High Speed Dries Tires and Makes Blowout Easy

One of the most expert tire men in the country recently called the attention of motorcar owners to the manner in which tire wear increases with speed. The faster a tire travels, the more heat it generates internally. Normal speed does not increase the internal heat to a dangerous degree, but excess speed will not only raise the heat above the danger point, but may actually cause further vulcanization to take place. This heat not only dries out the friction gum between the plies of fabric but the very fabric itself, lowering the elasticity of the tire, decreasing its resiliency and weakening the tire so that it will blow out early.

Way to Harden Iron

At times it is desirable to harden small cast iron parts. Here's how: Take a half pint of sulphuric acid, two quarts of common salt, one-half pound of saltpeter, two pounds of alum, a quarter pound of prussiate of potash, quarter pound of cyanide of potash and dissolve in ten gallons of soft water. Heat the iron to a cherry red and dip in the solution. If the parts are wanted hard, repeated heating and dipping will be necessary.

Cleaning Commutator

When the generator commutator becomes dirty it may be cleaned by wrapping a piece of sandpaper around the end of a stick and holding it in contact with the copper surface, the engine being run meanwhile. Fine sandpaper only should be used. Emery cloth should never be employed. —Chicago Tribune.

Clean Generator Brushes

Examine generator brushes about twice a season. The main troubles brushes are subject to are brushes sticking in holders, holders overheating, brushes fitted poorly to commutator, weak holder springs or brushes grounded by dirt, oil or carbon particles.

Care of Steering Wheel

A slightly tapering bolt with a number of steel washers under the head, so that, by removing one or more, the bolt may be tightened in its bearings, makes an admirable steering gear connection. Incidentally, too much attention cannot be given to obtaining dependable steering gears.

"BRUCE'S CHARIOT" KEEPS TAB ON CAR

C. S. Bruce of the United States bureau of standards operates the government-owned flivver, which consists of ninety pieces of apparatus which tell the complete story, for the first time, of what happens to the car and what the car does during a tour. This car has been dubbed "Bruce's chariot." The apparatus constructed tells such things as the number of explosions in each cylinder, as well as the number of revolutions of each wheel, the weight of the air used by the engine, how much work the piston does in sucking in air and gas, and many other things. The stove-pipe apparatus is used to measure wind velocity and to obtain wind protection. The car is being used in tests looking to improving motor efficiency and performance.

Originated Popular Phrase

The phrase "Swinging around the circle" was first applied by Andrew Johnson to his trip to Chicago in 1866 to lay the corner stone of the monument to Stephen A. Douglas. He went west and made political speeches in all the large cities.

1,300-MILE CANOE TRIP VIA OCEAN ROUTE.

George H. G. Smith, a mining engineer of Toronto, Can., has arrived in New York after a 1,300-mile canoe trip from Cape Breton Island, Nova Scotia. His canoe weighed but fifty-five pounds, was fifteen feet long and had a beam of thirty-two inches. He made the journey in forty-three days of actual paddling. He declared he intends to cross the Atlantic Ocean in the canoe to win a bet.

GETS SISLER WHILE COLLINS SLIPS AWAY

Cy Perkins of Athletics in Very Peculiar Position.

Cy Perkins of the Philadelphia Athletics is considered one of the best catchers in either major league. As a matter of fact a number of experts consider him the premier backstop of the big show.

Perkins does everything well. But no one thing better than throw. He has a wonderful arm and gets the ball away with unerring accuracy. A number of the Philadelphia pitchers permit opposing runners to get a big lead, but despite this Perkins turns most of them back

Eddie Collins of the Chicago White Sox and George Sisler of the Browns are two of the best base runners in the American league. There is little to choose between them, yet Sisler has always been easy for Perkins to throw out, while Collins has been correspondingly tough.

In a game between Chicago and the Athletics which Mack's club won 3 to 2, Collins in the eighth inning hit safely and a moment later tried to steal second Pitcher Harris permitted him to get away to a flying start, and only a remarkable throw by Perkins made it possible to get Collins at second. That throw just about saved the game.

After the contest Perkins remarked: "Although I have been in the American league a number of years, that is the first time I can ever remember throwing out Eddie Collins. It has always seemed that every time he started to steal on me, something always happened to make the attempt successful. Throwing Collins out today is the first time in my career, if my memory serves me correctly, and I have been trying to do it for over a half dozen years."

Pitcher Complex In Crucial Game

Both Teams Facing Pitching Problem in Deciding Game Today of World Series—Peckinpaugh Again Injured—Crowds Storm Griffith Park.

By David J. Walsh.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Oct. 10.—The seventh game of the world series today may be pitched by Robert M. LaFollette and Tammany Young with one Orb Connelly calling the balls and strikes.

It may not be quite that bad in the final analysis, but if the Washington Senators and the New York Giants summon better pitchers than Messrs. LaFollette and Young for the final game of the world series this exceedingly fair afternoon this writer will be considerably surprised. It promises to be rather a spacious occasion.

Both clubs were prepared to enter the so-called crucial game for the championship of the world with every pitcher pitched to his ultimate limit and the Washington club badly shot by the inevitable indisposition of Roger Peckinpaugh, short stop, captain and mainspring of the works in general.

Neither has a fair hand to draw to, but the Senators have a pair of deuces and if they fill on the final draw it will only be luck. They are down to their last chip and the Giants are ready to bet the size of the pot.

Unless a certain young man by the name of Taylor can play baseball according to major league requirements, the Senators are all over and done with. They tried to get by with Miller at third base in the third, fourth and fifth games and woe was theirs. Miller was just as good a third baseman as Uncle Joe Cannon. Perhaps Taylor is a better performer. He couldn't be worse.

In spite of which the citizenry of the fair city bought tickets today with two handed enthusiasm. They began lining up outside the box offices after yesterday's general excitement and were still at it when the sun peeped over the Potomac hills this morning. The chances of a capacity crowd this afternoon was no less imminent than the dawn of tomorrow.

Peckinpaugh might be out of the rest of the series and Johnson, Zachary and Marberry cooked for all the good they might do today, but Washington was the same loyal city it was at the start of the series. It still felt that the Senators were the best ball club and was willing to back its judgment even money and let the worst man lose. There was a superfluity of loose Washington money to be had for the asking in any of the downtown hotels.

The identity of the boys who will pitch this ball game is something that Einstein and the rest of the scientists should decide. The Senators have George Mogridge, Marberry, Zanhiser, Ogden and Nick Altrock; the Giants McQuillan, Watson and Hughey Jennings. We will eliminate Altrock and Jennings because their duties on the coaching lines are too confining.

Harking back to the others. Mogridge was about pitched out in beating the Giants for eight and a fraction innings the other day. Marberry most certainly will be held for relief, if any, and the Giants have no confidence whatsoever in Watson.

That leaves the situation to the tender mercies of Ogden and Zanheiser of the Senators, and McQuillan of the Giants. It should be the end of a perfect series. In a choice of two evils, the writer would incline toward Ogden over Vanhiser.

Now for the Giants. They have McQuillan only and none other. Barnes was knocked off in the fourth game and will not return unless under pain of someone's dismissal. Nehf and Bentley have been pitched right out. Watson is a ne'er do well.

The Senators, minus Peckinpaugh, made ready to enter the final game at a decided disadvantage. They were forced to the expediency of shifting Bluege out of his natural position to shortstop and placing Taylor, a recruit with a mashed hand, on third base. It was not a very heartening shift with the odds as great as they happen to be.

Yet Washington today was a city that would not accept no for an answer. It went after all the available tickets in sight and at an early hour this morning the line outside the box office windows at Griffith Park numbered thousands where mere hundreds waited at the Polo Grounds. They had no pitcher in prospect but they felt they had a ball team and conducted themselves accordingly.

A price of $50, almost prohibitive for ordinary occasions, was set upon single tickets in the lobbies of downtown hotels.

Walden Plays Here Sunday

Cullbton and Russell will receive the pitching tasks Sunday at the Fair Grounds for the Colonials against the Walden team in a double-header. The Walden outfit will of course start Gus Hoehs in one of the games and in the other have either "Rosy" Ryan, Giant pitcher, or Enzman of the Newark International League team.

Important Grid Games Saturday

Outstanding Eastern Game Between Yale and Georgia—Mid-West, Ohio State Will Meet Iowa — Other Games.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Oct. 10.—The last touches preliminary to the opening of the heavy schedule in the 1924 football season will be provided in eastern mid-west and far west in gridiron games set for tomorrow.

Of the lot there are few which appear to great advantage in attractiveness over others.

Probably outstanding among eastern games is that between Georgia University, generally considered very strong in the southern conference and Yale, to be played in New Haven.

In the mid-west the contest between Ohio State and Iowa University will hold the spotlight, for it is a big ten game and covers the day's card for conference games in that sector.

California in the far west, meets Pomona in what is little more than a practice contest.

Other games scheduled include: Alabama vs. Mississippi College at Tuscaloosa; Chicago vs. Brown at Chicago; Cornell vs. Williams at Ithaca; Dartmouth vs. Vermont at Hanover; Furman vs. Mercer at Greenville; Georgia Tech vs. Florida at Atlanta; Harvard vs. Middlebury at Cambridge; Illinois vs. Butler at Urbana; Indiana vs. Louisiana State at Indianapolis; Kansas vs. Iowa State at Lawrence; Michigan vs. Michigan Aggies at East Lansing; Minnesota vs. Haskell at Minneapolis; Missouri vs. Missouri Wesleyan at Columbia; Northwestern vs. Cincinnati at Evanston; Penna vs. Swarthmore at Philadelphia; Penn State vs. Gettysburg at State College; Princeton vs. Lehigh at Princeton; Stanford vs. Olympic Club at Palo Alto; Tulane vs. Louisiana Tech at New Orleans; Army vs. Detroit at West Point; Navy vs. Marquette at Annapolis; Southern California vs. Arizona at Los Angeles; Wisconsin vs. Coe at Madison.
